

Farewell 2014

After months of burning the midnight oil, hard work and stress, our poor seniors needed a dose of fun. And reviving the “good old school days” is just what the doctor prescribed to take care of the dreaded “Boards hangover”.

The sadness of leaving school was soon overshadowed by the excitement in the air at the arrival of the batch, complete with glamorous saris and dashing suits. The girls got to relive their school days by making a bull’s eye for the much loved school washroom, where fashion notes were exchanged and then they were all set for their grand entry.

The juniors, burdened with the impossible mission of entertaining seniors who had been to hell and back and had probably lost all understanding of the word ‘humor’, did not fail in their task.
