How does the 3C differ from a traditional programme?

The biggest differentiator is that during the program students go to UK for 3 months and US for next three months. This is a unique proposition that no other programme offers. The programme gives a chance to interact with international faculty and students. Interacting at a global platform enables student to broaden thought process and think out of the box. The lectures delivered by brilliant faculty and a chance to interact with extremely accomplished fellow students create an unparalleled learning experience. Industry visits is a key element embedded within the programme. It will enable understanding global work environment, culture and understand the global dynamics better.

Our goal is preparing students to be more than just a better manager and to be a truly global manager.

The Program opens up hosts of opportunities and gives an edge over others in the international arena, whether while applying for further studies or gaining employment opportunities.

Why US and UK as destination?

The concept of 3 continent programs is based on providing an experiential learning opportunity from diverse yet integrated and different yet complementary economies that can add on well to the initial exposure received in India. UK and US are both English-speaking countries where many Indians have preferred to go for further studies or for career progression. The diaspora, cross-cultural environment and scale of development provides an excellent platform to experience the desired characteristics, growth, technology and impact of social & economic factors on one's domain of interest. The academic & industrial institutions of UK and US are further able to provide the best learning outcomes that are integral to the success of the 3 Continent Programmes.
