TAXATION LAW

Course Code: BBL 901

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

Power to tax has been described as the power to destroy. This idea is being floated often whenever the State introduces a new tax. Is this true? Is it not necessary that in order to raise revenue and place the economy on solid foundation, the taxing power should be conferred on the State? The power to tax shall not go unregulated. In this context of a federal structure the distribution of the taxing powers assumes added significance. Obviously, a study of the Constitutional framework on taxation becomes important. Along with this, an analysis of the different laws enacted in exercise of these powers with their safeguards and remedies sheds light on the mechanics of the taxation by the Union and the States.

Prerequisites:

Basic knowledge of History concerning taxation and Development of Tax Laws in India

Course Contents:

Module I: General Principles of Taxation Laws

History and Development of Tax Laws in India, Fundamental Principles relating to Tax Laws, Taxing power and constitutional limitations, Distinction between: Tax, Fee and Cess; Tax avoidance and Tax evasion .

Module II: Basic concepts of Income Tax

Income, Previous Year, assessment Year, Person, Assessee and Total Income, Income not included in the Total Income. Residential status, Clubbing of Income, Tax planning, Rate of Income Tax, Heads of Income, Salaries, Income from House Property, Income from Business or Profession, Capital Gains, Income from Other sources, Deductions under the Income Tax Act, 1961, Income Tax Authorities: Power and Functions, Filing of returns and procedure for assessment, Offences and Penal Sanctions .

Module III: Goods & Service Tax:

Genesis of GST in India, concept of GST, need for GST in India, GST vs VAT vs Service Tax, dual GST model, benefits of GST, constitutional amendment, taxable events of GST, relevant definitions, levy and collection of GST, recent amendments.

Examination Scheme:

Components	P/S/V	CT	C	A	EE

DISSERTATION

Course Code: BBL 1006

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

The objective of the dissertation is to enable students to undertake Doctrinal/Empirical Research to acquire an in depth understanding of the problem identified and to suggest legal solutions for the same

Guideline:

A project for dissertation culminates into a very important and final stage of a student's educational and learning processes at Amity Law School. This leads to the submission of innovative work of a high standard. A student is required to submit a statement on the theme that he/she would like to take up for research. The statement may cover the following points:

- Proposed title of the dissertation
- Problem identified for the research
- Rationale
- Objectives
- Research design
- Tentative chapterisation
- Bibliography

The dissertation may have around 100 pages, neatly typed and hardbound.

Sequence of items in the dissertation

The following sequence may be followed in the preparation of a dissertation:

1. Cover page (on the hardbound cover)
2. Title page
3. Table of contents (with page numbers)
4. List of cases
5. List of abbreviations
6. List of tables (if any with each table title and page number)
7. Chapters
8. Major findings, conclusions and suggestions
9. Bibliography
11. Appendices (if any)

Detail guidelines for the dissertation:

The aim of the dissertation is to provide you with an opportunity to further your intellectual and personal development in your chosen field by undertaking a significant theoretical / practical unit of activity, having an educational value at a level commensurate with the award of your degree.

The dissertation can be defined as a scholarly inquiry into a problem or an issue, involving a systematic approach to gathering and analysis of information / data, leading to the writing of a structured report.

Selecting the dissertation topic:

It is usual to give you some discretion in the choice of topic for the dissertation and the approach to be adopted. You will need to ensure that your dissertation is related to your field of specialization. Deciding this is often the most difficult part of the dissertation process and perhaps you have been thinking of a topic for some time.

Normally we would expect a student to keep the following in view while choosing a topic:

- Relevance to the relationship between contemporary international law and international community
- Relate to concerned one or more of the subjects or areas of study within the core program and specialization stream
- Clarity in focus so as to facilitate an in depth approach, subject to the availability of adequate sources of information and to your own knowledge
- Being of value and interest to your personal and professional as also social development

Dissertation plan or outline:

It is recommended that you should have a dissertation plan to guide you right from the outset. Essentially, the dissertation plan is an outline of what you intend to do chapter wise and it should, therefore, reflect the aims and objectives of your dissertation.

There are several reasons for having a dissertation plan:

- It provides a focus to your thoughts.
- It provides your faculty guide with an opportunity, at an early stage of your work, to make constructive comments and to help provide the direction of your research.
- The writing of a plan is the first formal stage of the writing process and therefore, helps build up your confidence.
- In many ways, the plan encourages you to come to terms with the reading, thinking and writing in a systematic and integrated way, with plenty of time left for changes.

Finally, the dissertation plan generally provides a revision point in the development of your dissertation report in order to allow appropriate changes in the scope and even direction of your work as it progresses

Dissertation format:

- All students, while writing their dissertation, must follow rules as under:
- Front page should contain title, author, name of the degree/diploma, the name of the guide and the date of submission.
- Preface
- Acknowledgment
- Table of contents, giving page references for each chapter and section.
- List of cases, list of international norms and national laws, list of abbreviations, appendices, graphs and tables giving titles and page references.
- An abstract of the dissertation (approximately 500 words) titled: Summary.

- Chapter I should be a general introduction, giving the background to the dissertation, the objectives of the dissertation, the rationale for the dissertation, the plan, hypothesis, methodological issues and problems. Limitations, if any, may also be pointed out.
- Other chapters will constitute the main body of the dissertation. The number of chapters and their sequence will usually vary depending on, among others, a critical review of the previous relevant works relating to your major findings, a discussion of their implications and conclusions, possibly with a suggestion of the direction of future research in the area.
- After this concluding chapter, you should give a list of all the references you have used. These should be cross - references with your text. For articles from journals, the following examples may be kept in view: Claude Bruderle in, “People’s Security as a New Measure of Global Stability,” 83 International Review of the Red Cross 353-367, pp. (2001) (International Committee for Red Cross, Geneva) For books, the following: Malcolm Shaw, International Law 367 (5th ed. 2003, reprint of low-priced ed. 2007) (Cambridge University Press, New Delhi) For edited books, the following: Richard Overy, “The Nuremberg Trials: International Law in the Making,” in Philippe Sands (ed), From Nuremberg to the Hague: The Future of International Criminal Justice 1 (2003) (Cambridge University Press, UK)
- Finally, you may give appendices which should only include relevant statistical data or material that cannot be fitted into the above categories.

The layout guidelines for dissertation:

- A4 size Paper
- Font: Arial (10 points) or Times New Roman (12 points)
- Line spacing: 1.5
- Top and bottom margins: 1 inch/ 2.5 cm; left and right margins: 1.25 inches/ 3 cm.

Assessment Scheme:

- Continuous evaluation (Marks 50): (Based on Abstract, Regularity, Adherence to initial plan, Records etc.)
- Final Evaluation (Marks 50)
 - Evaluation of dissertation -30
 - Presentation of research through a seminar -10
 - Viva voce based on dissertation -10

FAMILY LAW - I

Course Code: BBL 303

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

This Course aims at providing adequate Sociological perspective so that the basic concepts relating to family are expounded in their social setting. It strives to give an overview of some of the current problems arising out of the foundational inequalities in the various family concepts. Another objective of the course is to view family law not merely as a separate system of personal laws based upon religions but as the one cutting across the religious lines and eventually enabling us to fulfill the constitutional directive of uniform civil code at least jurisprudentially at the academic study by identifying the core concepts in marriage laws of all communities to evolve a uniform civil code devoid of political nest. Women and children have special family relations and, therefore, it is aspired to develop insights amongst the students to ensure protection of constitutional rights of women and children in family law administration. In view of the conflicts of the interpersonal laws, conversion is causing problems. How conversion affects the family and whether it is compatible with the concept of secularism and to what extent such problem would stand resolved with the enactment of a uniform civil code, are some of the basics that needs to be examined.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

Course Code: BBL 405

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

Administrative law is as old as the administration itself. However, the form in which we find it today, Administrative is described a most outstanding legal development of the twentieth century. The reason for this development can only be attributed to a change of philosophy as regards the role and function of the State. The change in the concept of State from 'laissez faire' to a 'welfare state' has led to emergence of state activities in almost all spheres of human life. With the phenomenal increase in the area of state operation, the State was bound to take over a number of functions which were earlier left to private enterprise. In order to ensure that such functions are performed effectively and further due to certain other factors namely contingency, expertise etc. administrative agencies are given extraordinary powers and functions such as to make rules and deciding disputes apart from its wide discretionary powers. Obviously, this necessitated a new set of laws to check the possible abuses of such extraordinary powers on the part of administration. The courts in India and abroad in the course of time have developed various doctrines and methods to deal with such p[roblems. However, there is no end to this journey. The field is still open for new changes.

The main thrust of administrative law has been to study the nature of functions and powers exercised by the authorities on whom they have been conferred on and the study of remedies available to common man in case the limits of exercising power are transferred by such an authority. The focus or the centre point of this study, as usual as in cases of the study of other branches of public law, is the rights of individual wis a wis the public interest.

Pre-requisites:

Students should have a basic understanding about the functioning of administrative bodies. Further since all authorities are governed by the provisions of the Constitution, basic knowledge about constitutional law is essential

Course Contents:

Module I: Evolution, Nature and scope of Administrative law

Course Code: BBL 901

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

Power to tax has been described as the power to destroy. This idea is being floated often whenever the State introduces a new tax. Is this true? Is it not necessary that in order to raise revenue and place the economy on solid foundation, the taxing power should be conferred on the State? The power to tax shall not go unregulated. In this context of a federal structure the distribution of the taxing powers assumes added significance. Obviously, a study of the Constitutional framework on taxation becomes important. Along with this, an analysis of the different laws enacted in exercise of these powers with their safeguards and remedies sheds light on the mechanics of the taxation by the Union and the States.

Prerequisites:

Basic knowledge of History concerning taxation and Development of Tax Laws in India

Course Contents:

Module I: General Principles of Taxation Laws

History and Development of Tax Laws in India, Fundamental Principles relating to Tax Laws, Taxing power and constitutional limitations, Distinction between: Tax, Fee and Cess; Tax avoidance and Tax evasion .

Module II: Basic concepts of Income Tax

Income, Previous Year, assessment Year, Person, Assessee and Total Income, Income not included in the Total Income. Residential status, Clubbing of Income, Tax planning, Rate of Income Tax, Heads of Income, Salaries, Income from House Property, Income from Business or Profession, Capital Gains, Income from Other sources, Deductions under the Income Tax Act, 1961, Income Tax Authorities: Power and Functions, Filing of returns and procedure for assessment, Offences and Penal Sanctions .

Module III: Goods & Service Tax:

Genesis of GST in India, concept of GST, need for GST in India, GST vs VAT vs Service Tax, dual GST model, benefits of GST, constitutional amendment, taxable events of GST, relevant definitions, levy and collection of GST, recent amendments.

Examination Scheme:

Components	P/S/V	CT	C	A	EE
Weightage (%)	10	10	5	5	70

Student Learning Outcomes:

- To ensure all newly qualified law graduates have the technical and professional skills in tax laws to begin their career and from which to build their ongoing professional development.
- Aims to provide students with the technical skills and underpinning knowledge to perform their work as an advocate in a variety of Tax environments.
- To act as consultant in public sector and/or other corporate sectors on the matters concerning taxation.

DISSERTATION

Course Code: BBL 1006

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

The objective of the dissertation is to enable students to undertake Doctrinal/Empirical Research to acquire an in depth understanding of the problem identified and to suggest legal solutions for the same

Guideline:

A project for dissertation culminates into a very important and final stage of a student's educational and learning processes at Amity Law School. This leads to the submission of innovative work of a high standard. A student is required to submit a statement on the theme that he/she would like to take up for research. The statement may cover the following points:

- Proposed title of the dissertation
- Problem identified for the research
- Rationale
- Objectives
- Research design
- Tentative chapterisation
- Bibliography

The dissertation may have around 100 pages, neatly typed and hardbound.

Sequence of items in the dissertation

The following sequence may be followed in the preparation of a dissertation:

1. Cover page (on the hardbound cover)
2. Title page
3. Table of contents (with page numbers)
4. List of cases
5. List of abbreviations
6. List of tables (if any with each table title and page number)
7. Chapters
8. Major findings, conclusions and suggestions
9. Bibliography
11. Appendices (if any)

Detail guidelines for the dissertation:

The aim of the dissertation is to provide you with an opportunity to further your intellectual and personal development in your chosen field by undertaking a significant theoretical / practical unit of activity, having an educational value at a level commensurate with the award of your degree.

The dissertation can be defined as a scholarly inquiry into a problem or an issue, involving a systematic approach to gathering and analysis of information / data, leading to the writing of a structured report.

Selecting the dissertation topic:

It is usual to give you some discretion in the choice of topic for the dissertation and the approach to be adopted. You will need to ensure that your dissertation is related to your field of specialization. Deciding this is often the most difficult part of the dissertation process and perhaps you have been thinking of a topic for some time.

Normally we would expect a student to keep the following in view while choosing a topic:

- Relevance to the relationship between contemporary international law and international community
- Relate to concerned one or more of the subjects or areas of study within the core program and specialization stream
- Clarity in focus so as to facilitate an in depth approach, subject to the availability of adequate sources of information and to your own knowledge
- Being of value and interest to your personal and professional as also social development

Dissertation plan or outline:

It is recommended that you should have a dissertation plan to guide you right from the outset. Essentially, the dissertation plan is an outline of what you intend to do chapter wise and it should, therefore, reflect the aims and objectives of your dissertation.

There are several reasons for having a dissertation plan:

- It provides a focus to your thoughts.
- It provides your faculty guide with an opportunity, at an early stage of your work, to make constructive comments and to help provide the direction of your research.
- The writing of a plan is the first formal stage of the writing process and therefore, helps build up your confidence.
- In many ways, the plan encourages you to come to terms with the reading, thinking and writing in a systematic and integrated way, with plenty of time left for changes.

Finally, the dissertation plan generally provides a revision point in the development of your dissertation report in order to allow appropriate changes in the scope and even direction of your work as it progresses

Dissertation format:

- All students, while writing their dissertation, must follow rules as under:
- Front page should contain title, author, name of the degree/diploma, the name of the guide and the date of submission.
- Preface
- Acknowledgment
- Table of contents, giving page references for each chapter and section.
- List of cases, list of international norms and national laws, list of abbreviations, appendices, graphs and tables giving titles and page references.
- An abstract of the dissertation (approximately 500 words) titled: Summary.

- Chapter I should be a general introduction, giving the background to the dissertation, the objectives of the dissertation, the rationale for the dissertation, the plan, hypothesis, methodological issues and problems. Limitations, if any, may also be pointed out.
- Other chapters will constitute the main body of the dissertation. The number of chapters and their sequence will usually vary depending on, among others, a critical review of the previous relevant works relating to your major findings, a discussion of their implications and conclusions, possibly with a suggestion of the direction of future research in the area.
- After this concluding chapter, you should give a list of all the references you have used. These should be cross - references with your text. For articles from journals, the following examples may be kept in view: Claude Bruderle in, “People’s Security as a New Measure of Global Stability,” 83 International Review of the Red Cross 353-367, pp. (2001) (International Committee for Red Cross, Geneva) For books, the following: Malcolm Shaw, International Law 367 (5th ed. 2003, reprint of low-priced ed. 2007) (Cambridge University Press, New Delhi) For edited books, the following: Richard Overy, “The Nuremberg Trials: International Law in the Making,” in Philippe Sands (ed), From Nuremberg to the Hague: The Future of International Criminal Justice 1 (2003) (Cambridge University Press, UK)
- Finally, you may give appendices which should only include relevant statistical data or material that cannot be fitted into the above categories.

The layout guidelines for dissertation:

- A4 size Paper
- Font: Arial (10 points) or Times New Roman (12 points)
- Line spacing: 1.5
- Top and bottom margins: 1 inch/ 2.5 cm; left and right margins: 1.25 inches/ 3 cm.

Assessment Scheme:

- Continuous evaluation (Marks 50): (Based on Abstract, Regularity, Adherence to initial plan, Records etc.)
- Final Evaluation (Marks 50)
 - Evaluation of dissertation -30
 - Presentation of research through a seminar -10
 - Viva voce based on dissertation -10

ENVIRONMENTAL STUDIES-I

Course Code: BCL 103

Credit Units: 02

Course Contents:

Module I: The multidisciplinary nature of environmental studies

Definition, scope and importance

Need for public awareness

Module II: Natural Resources Renewable and non-renewable resources:

Natural resources and associated problems

Forest resources: Use and over-exploitation, deforestation, case studies. Timber extraction, mining, dams and their effects on forests and tribal people.

Water resources: Use and over-utilization of surface and ground water, floods, drought, conflicts over water, dams-benefits and problems.

Mineral resources: Use and exploitation, environmental effects of extracting and using mineral resources, case studies.

Food resources: World food problems, changes caused by agriculture and overgrazing, effects of modern agriculture, fertilizer-pesticide problems, water logging, salinity, case studies.

Energy resources: Growing energy needs, renewable and non-renewable energy sources, use of alternate energy sources, case studies.

Land resources: Land as a resource, land degradation, man induced landslides, soil erosion and desertification.

Role of an individual in conservation of natural resources.

Equitable use of resources for sustainable lifestyles.

Module III: Ecosystems

Concept of an ecosystem, Structure and function of an ecosystem, Producers, consumers and decomposers, Energy flow in the ecosystem, Ecological succession

Food chains, food webs and ecological pyramids

Introduction, types, characteristic features, structure and function of the following ecosystem:

- a. Forest ecosystem
- b. Grassland ecosystem
- c. Desert ecosystem
- d. Aquatic ecosystems (ponds, streams, lakes, rivers, ocean estuaries)

Module IV: Biodiversity and its conservation

Introduction – Definition: genetic, species and ecosystem diversity

Biogeographical classification of India

Value of biodiversity: consumptive use, productive use, social, ethical aesthetic and option values Biodiversity at global, national and local levels

India as a mega-diversity nation, Hot-spots of biodiversity

Threats to biodiversity: habitat loss, poaching of wildlife, man wildlife conflicts, Endangered and endemic species of India

Conservation of biodiversity: In-situ and Ex-situ conservation of biodiversity

Course Code: BCL 201

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

The objective of this paper is to make the student to understand how the business organizations work by applying economic principles in their business management. The course will attempt to relate theory to practice and try to instill in students the ability to apply basic microeconomic concepts to the understanding of everyday phenomena.

Course Contents:

Module I: Nature and Scope of Economics

Difference between micro and macroeconomics, Nature of economic problem, Basic postulates, Role of price mechanism, Theory of Demand and Analysis: Demand, Demand determinants, Law of demand, Characteristics exceptions, Elasticity of demand, Price elasticity, Types, Determining factors, Change in demand and elasticity of demand, Business applications of price elasticity, Concepts of income and cross elasticity of demand., Measurement of price elasticity of demand by total outlay method.

Module II: Consumer Behaviour

Consumer sovereignty, Limitations; Approaches to the study of consumer behaviour: Cardinal approach, The law of equi-marginal utility, Ordinal approach, Indifference curve analysis, Properties; Consumer surplus, Meaning, Analysis limitations, Price, Income and substitution effects, Giffen goods, Engel curve.

Module III: Theory of Production and Cost

Concept of Production Function, Isoquants, Marginal rate of technical substitution, Law of variable proportions, The concepts of firm and industry, Revenue and cost curves: Short and long run, Equilibrium of the firm.

Module IV: Market Structures and Business Decisions

Objectives of Business firm: Perfect Competition, Profit maximization and equilibrium of firm and industry, Short run and long run supply curves, Price and output determination; Practical Applications: Monopoly, Determination of price under monopoly, Equilibrium of a firm , Comparison between perfect competition and monopoly; Multi Plant monopoly, Price Discrimination, Practical applications; Monopolistic Competition: Meaning and characteristics, Price and output Determination under monopolistic competition, Excess capacity under monopolistic competition; Oligopoly : Characteristics, Indeterminate pricing and output, Classical models of Oligopoly, Price leadership, Collusive oligopoly, Kinked demand curve.

Module V: Factor Pricing - I

Module VI: Factor Pricing - II

Interests: Concept and theories of interest: Loan able Fund Theory, Liquidity Preference Theory; Profit : Concepts and Theories of Profit , Innovation Theory, Dynamic Theory, Risk Theory and Uncertainty Bearing Theory.

BUSINESS MATHEMATICS

Course Code: BCL 202

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

To familiarize the students with basic mathematical tools and the application of the same to business and economic situations.

Course Contents:

Module I: Kinds of Progressions

Arithmetic Progressions (A.P.), Geometric progressions (G.P.) and Harmonic Progressions(H.P.) : Definition of A.P, G.P and H.P, Simple examples.

Module II: Compound Interest and Annuities

Certain different types of interest rates, Concept of present value and amount of a sum, Types of annuities, Present Value and amount of an annuity, including the case of continuous compounding; Valuation of simple loans and debentures, Problems relating sinking funds.

Module III: Set Theory

Set, Subset, Types of sets operations on sets venn diagram, Demorgan's Laws, Applications of set theory, Laws of indices.

Module IV: Matrices and Determinants

Matrices and determinants : Definition of a matrix, Types of matrices, Algebra of matrices, Properties of determinants, Calculation of values of determinants upto third order, Adjoint of a matrix, Finding inverse of a matrix, Rank of a matrix, Solution of system of linear equations by Cramer's Rule and Matrix Inverse Method (including not more than three variables).

Module V: Linear Programming Problem (L.P.P.)

Formulation of L.P.P., Graphical method of solution, Problems relating to two variables including the case of mixed constraints, Cases having no solution, Multiple solutions, Unbounded Solution.

Module VI: Function of Real Variables

Function of real variables, Linear, Quadratic, Exponential, Logarithmic and Inverse functions and their graphs, Illustrative examples, Limit of a function: Theorems on Limit (without proof), Simple examples.

Module VII: Differentiation

Definition, Derivative using first principle, Method of Differentiation of sum, Difference, Product and quotient of two functions, Derivative of composite, Inverse, Exponential, Logarithmic, Parametric and implicit functions; Second order derivative.

Module VIII: Maxima and Minima

Case of one variable involving second order derivative, Average cost, Average revenue functions, Marginal cost, Marginal revenue, Elasticity of demand.

Module IX: Integration

Integration: Integration as anti-derivative process, Standard forms, Method of integration by substitution, by parts and by use of partial fractions, Definite integral and their properties, Finding areas in simple cases, Determination of Cost, Revenue and demand function, Consumer's surplus and Producer's surplus.

ENVIRONMENTAL STUDIES-II

Course Code: BCL203

Credit Units: 02

Course Contents:

Module I: Environmental Pollution

Definition, causes, effects and control measures of:

- a. Air pollution
- b. Water pollution
- c. Soil pollution
- d. Marine pollution
- e. Noise pollution
- f. Thermal pollution
- g. Nuclear pollution

Solid waste management: Causes, effects and control measures of urban and industrial wastes. Role of an individual in prevention of pollution. Pollution case studies. Disaster management: floods, earthquake, cyclone and landslides.

Module II: Social Issues and the Environment

From unsustainable to sustainable development, Urban problems and related to energy, Water conservation, rain water harvesting, watershed management

Resettlement and rehabilitation of people; its problems and concerns Case studies.

Environmental ethics: Issues and possible solutions

Climate change, GloBCL warming, Acid rain, Ozone layer depletion, Nuclear Accidents and Holocaust case studies.

Fireworks/Crackers – Introduction, ill effects on environment and humans.

Wasteland reclamation, Consumerism and waste products, Environmental Protection Act, Air (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, Water (Prevention and control of Pollution) Act, Wildlife Protection Act, Forest Conservation Act

Issues involved in enforcement of environmental legislation Public awareness

FAMILY LAW - I

Course Code: BCL 303

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

This Course aims at providing adequate Sociological perspective so that the basic concepts relating to family are expounded in their social setting. It strives to give an overview of some of the current problems arising out of the foundational inequalities in the various family concepts. Another objective of the course is to view family law not merely as a separate system of personal laws based upon religions but as the one cutting across the religious lines and eventually enabling us to fulfill the constitutional directive of uniform civil code at least jurisprudentially at the academic study by identifying the core concepts in marriage laws of all communities to evolve a uniform civil code devoid of political nest. Women and children have special family relations and, therefore, it is aspired to develop insights amongst the students to ensure protection of constitutional rights of women and children in family law administration. In view of the conflicts of the interpersonal laws, conversion is causing problems. How conversion affects the family and whether it is compatible with the concept of secularism and to what extent such problem would stand resolved with the enactment of a uniform civil code, are some of the basics that needs to be examined.

Course Code: BCL 405

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

Administrative law is as old as the administration itself. However, the form in which we find it today, Administrative is described a most outstanding legal development of the twentieth century. The reason for this development can only be attributed to a change of philosophy as regards the role and function of the State. The change in the concept of State from 'laissez faire' to a 'welfare state' has led to emergence of state activities in almost all spheres of human life. With the phenomenal increase in the area of state operation, the State was bound to take over a number of functions which were earlier left to private enterprise. In order to ensure that such functions are performed effectively and further due to certain other factors namely contingency, expertise etc. administrative agencies are given extraordinary powers and functions such as to make rules and deciding disputes apart from its wide discretionary powers. Obviously, this necessitated a new set of laws to check the possible abuses of such extraordinary powers on the part of administration. The courts in India and abroad in the course of time have developed various doctrines and methods to deal with such p[roblems. However, there is no end to this journey. The field is still open for new changes.

The main thrust of administrative law has been to study the nature of functions and powers exercised by the authorities on whom they have been conferred on and the study of remedies available to common man in case the limits of exercising power are transferred by such an authority. The focus or the centre point of this study, as usual as in cases of the study of other branches of public law, is the rights of individual wis a wis the public interest.

Course Contents:

Module I: Evolution, Nature and scope of Administrative law

Definitions, scope, classification and reason for the growth of administrative law; Relationship between constitutional law and administrative law; doctrine of Separation of Powers and its application in administrative law; Doctrine of Rule of law and application in administrative law.

Module III: Judicial function of Administration

Reason for Administrative adjudication; Tribunals and classification of Tribunals; Principles of Natural Justice; Ombudsman: Lokpal, Lokayukta; Central Vigilance Commission (CVC).

Module IV: Administrative discretion

Need and legality and abuses; Constitutional objections and discretion, failure to exercise discretion; Doctrine of proportionality; Legitimate expectation.

Module V: Judicial control of administrative action

Courts as the final authority to determine the legality of Administrative actions ; Public Interest Litigation and the principle of locus standi, laches, Judicial review ; scope and extent, statutory appeals, writs.

TAXATION LAW

Course Code: BCL 803

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

Power to tax has been described as the power to destroy. This idea is being floated often whenever the State introduces a new tax. Is this true? Is it not necessary that in order to raise revenue and place the economy on solid foundation, the taxing power should be conferred on the State? The power to tax shall not go unregulated. In this context of a federal structure the distribution of the taxing powers assumes added significance. Obviously, a study of the Constitutional framework on taxation becomes important. Along with this, an analysis of the different laws enacted in exercise of these powers with their safeguards and remedies sheds light on the mechanics of the taxation by the Union and the States.

Course Contents:

Module I: General Principles of Taxation Laws

History and Development of Tax Laws in India, Fundamental Principles relating to Tax Laws, Taxing power and constitutional limitations, Distinction between: Tax, Fee and Cess; Tax avoidance and Tax evasion .

Module II: Basic concepts of Income Tax

DISSERTATION

Course Code: BCL 1005

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

The objective of the dissertation is to enable students to undertake Doctrinal/Empirical Research to acquire an in depth understanding of the problem identified and to suggest legal solutions for the same

Guideline:

A project for dissertation culminates into a very important and final stage of a student's educational and learning processes at Amity Law School. This leads to the submission of innovative work of a high standard. A student is required to submit a statement on the theme that he/she would like to take up for research. The statement may cover the following points:

- Proposed title of the dissertation
- Problem identified for the research
- Rationale
- Objectives
- Research design
- Tentative chapterisation
- Bibliography

The dissertation may have around 100 pages, neatly typed and hardbound.

Sequence of items in the dissertation

The following sequence may be followed in the preparation of a dissertation:

1. Cover page (on the hardbound cover)
2. Title page
3. Table of contents (with page numbers)
4. List of cases
5. List of abbreviations
6. List of tables (if any with each table title and page number)
7. Chapters
8. Major findings, conclusions and suggestions
9. Bibliography
11. Appendices (if any)

Detail guidelines for the dissertation:

The aim of the dissertation is to provide you with an opportunity to further your intellectual and personal development in your chosen field by undertaking a significant theoretical / practical unit of activity, having an educational value at a level commensurate with the award of your degree.

The dissertation can be defined as a scholarly inquiry into a problem or an issue, involving a systematic approach to gathering and analysis of information / data, leading to the writing of a structured report.

Selecting the dissertation topic:

It is usual to give you some discretion in the choice of topic for the dissertation and the approach to be adopted. You will need to ensure that your dissertation is related to your field of specialization. Deciding this is often the most difficult part of the dissertation process and perhaps you have been thinking of a topic for some time.

Normally we would expect a student to keep the following in view while choosing a topic:

- Relevance to the relationship between contemporary international law and international community
- Relate to concerned one or more of the subjects or areas of study within the core program and specialization stream
- Clarity in focus so as to facilitate an in depth approach, subject to the availability of adequate sources of information and to your own knowledge
- Being of value and interest to your personal and professional as also social development

Dissertation plan or outline:

It is recommended that you should have a dissertation plan to guide you right from the outset. Essentially, the dissertation plan is an outline of what you intend to do chapter wise and it should, therefore, reflect the aims and objectives of your dissertation.

There are several reasons for having a dissertation plan:

- It provides a focus to your thoughts.
- It provides your faculty guide with an opportunity, at an early stage of your work, to make constructive comments and to help provide the direction of your research.
- The writing of a plan is the first formal stage of the writing process and therefore, helps build up your confidence.
- In many ways, the plan encourages you to come to terms with the reading, thinking and writing in a systematic and integrated way, with plenty of time left for changes.

Finally, the dissertation plan generally provides a revision point in the development of your dissertation report in order to allow appropriate changes in the scope and even direction of your work as it progresses

Dissertation format:

- All students, while writing their dissertation, must follow rules as under:
- Front page should contain title, author, name of the degree/diploma, the name of the guide and the date of submission.
- Preface
- Acknowledgment
- Table of contents, giving page references for each chapter and section.
- List of cases, list of international norms and national laws, list of abbreviations, appendices, graphs and tables giving titles and page references.

- An abstract of the dissertation (approximately 500 words) titled: Summary.
- Chapter I should be a general introduction, giving the background to the dissertation, the objectives of the dissertation, the rationale for the dissertation, the plan, hypothesis, methodological issues and problems. Limitations, if any, may also be pointed out.
- Other chapters will constitute the main body of the dissertation. The number of chapters and their sequence will usually vary depending on, among others, a critical review of the previous relevant works relating to your major findings, a discussion of their implications and conclusions, possibly with a suggestion of the direction of future research in the area.
- After this concluding chapter, you should give a list of all the references you have used. These should be cross - references with your text. For articles from journals, the following examples may be kept in view: Claude Bruderle in, “People’s Security as a New Measure of GloBCL Stability,” 83 International Review of the Red Cross 353-367, pp. (2001) (International Committee for Red Cross, Geneva) For books, the following: Malcolm Shaw, International Law 367 (5th ed. 2003, reprint of low-priced ed. 2007) (Cambridge University Press, New Delhi) For edited books, the following: Richard Overy, “The Nuremberg Trials: International Law in the Making,” in Philippe Sands (ed), From Nuremberg to the Hague: The Future of International Criminal Justice 1 (2003) (Cambridge University Press, UK)
- Finally, you may give appendices which should only include relevant statistical data or material that cannot be fitted into the above categories.

The layout guidelines for dissertation:

- A4 size Paper
- Font: Arial (10 points) or Times New Roman (12 points)
- Line spacing: 1.5
- Top and bottom margins: 1 inch/ 2.5 cm; left and right margins: 1.25 inches/ 3 cm.

Assessment Scheme:

- Continuous evaluation (Marks 50): (Based on Abstract, Regularity, Adherence to initial plan, Records etc.)
- Final Evaluation (Marks 50)
 - Evaluation of dissertation -30
 - Presentation of research through a seminar -10
 - Viva voce based on dissertation -10

LAW OF CONTRACT - I

Course Code: BCL 104

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

Whatever may be the nature of a given society, the contractual relations, as are obtained in that society, are governed by certain principles which are more or less of a general and basic nature. In India these general principles are included in the statute of the Indian Contract Act. 1872. This course is designed to acquaint a student with the conceptual and operational parameters of these various general principles of contractual relations. Specific enforcement of contract is an important aspect of the law of contracts. Analysis of the kinds of contracts that can be specifically enforced and the methods of enforcement forms a significant segment of this study.

Course Contents:

Module I: Formation of Contract

Credit Units: 02

Course Contents:

Module I: The multidisciplinary nature of environmental studies

Definition, scope and importance

Need for public awareness

Module II: Natural Resources Renewable and non-renewable resources:

Natural resources and associated problems

Forest resources: Use and over-exploitation, deforestation, case studies. Timber extraction, mining, dams and their effects on forests and tribal people.

Water resources: Use and over-utilization of surface and ground water, floods, drought, conflicts over water, dams-benefits and problems.

Mineral resources: Use and exploitation, environmental effects of extracting and using mineral resources, case studies.

Food resources: World food problems, changes caused by agriculture and overgrazing, effects of modern agriculture, fertilizer-pesticide problems, water logging, salinity, case studies.

Energy resources: Growing energy needs, renewable and non-renewable energy sources, use of alternate energy sources, case studies.

Land resources: Land as a resource, land degradation, man induced landslides, soil erosion and desertification.

Role of an individual in conservation of natural resources.

Equitable use of resources for sustainable lifestyles.

Module III: Ecosystems

Concept of an ecosystem, Structure and function of an ecosystem, Producers, consumers and decomposers, Energy flow in the ecosystem, Ecological succession

Food chains, food webs and ecological pyramids

Introduction, types, characteristic features, structure and function of the following ecosystem:

- Forest ecosystem
- Grassland ecosystem
- Desert ecosystem
- Aquatic ecosystems (ponds, streams, lakes, rivers, ocean estuaries)

Module IV: Biodiversity and its conservation

Introduction – Definition: genetic, species and ecosystem diversity

Biogeographical classification of India

Value of biodiversity: consumptive use, productive use, social, ethical aesthetic and option values Biodiversity at global, national and local levels

India as a mega-diversity nation, Hot-spots of biodiversity

Threats to biodiversity: habitat loss, poaching of wildlife, man wildlife conflicts, Endangered and endemic species of India

Course Code: BCL 201

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

The objective of this paper is to make the student to understand how the business organizations work by applying economic principles in their business management. The course will attempt to relate theory to practice and try to instill in students the ability to apply basic microeconomic concepts to the understanding of everyday phenomena.

Course Contents:

Module I: Nature and Scope of Economics

Difference between micro and macroeconomics, Nature of economic problem, Basic postulates, Role of price mechanism, Theory of Demand and Analysis: Demand, Demand determinants, Law of demand, Characteristics exceptions, Elasticity of demand, Price elasticity, Types, Determining factors, Change in demand and elasticity of demand, Business applications of price elasticity, Concepts of income and cross elasticity of demand., Measurement of price elasticity of demand by total outlay method.

Module II: Consumer Behaviour

Consumer sovereignty, Limitations; Approaches to the study of consumer behaviour: Cardinal approach, The law of equi-marginal utility, Ordinal approach, Indifference curve analysis, Properties; Consumer surplus, Meaning, Analysis limitations, Price, Income and substitution effects, Giffen goods, Engel curve.

Module III: Theory of Production and Cost

Concept of Production Function, Isoquants, Marginal rate of technical substitution, Law of variable proportions, The concepts of firm and industry, Revenue and cost curves: Short and long run, Equilibrium of the firm.

Module IV: Market Structures and Business Decisions

Objectives of Business firm: Perfect Competition, Profit maximization and equilibrium of firm and industry, Short run and long run supply curves, Price and output determination; Practical Applications: Monopoly, Determination of price under monopoly, Equilibrium of a firm , Comparison between perfect competition and monopoly; Multi Plant monopoly, Price Discrimination, Practical applications; Monopolistic Competition: Meaning and characteristics, Price and output Determination under monopolistic competition, Excess capacity under monopolistic competition; Oligopoly : Characteristics, Indeterminate pricing and output, Classical models of Oligopoly, Price leadership, Collusive oligopoly, Kinked demand curve.

Module V: Factor Pricing - I

Module VI: Factor Pricing - II

Interests: Concept and theories of interest: Loan able Fund Theory, Liquidity Preference Theory; Profit : Concepts and Theories of Profit , Innovation Theory, Dynamic Theory, Risk Theory and Uncertainty Bearing Theory.

BUSINESS MATHEMATICS

Course Code: BCL 202

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

To familiarize the students with basic mathematical tools and the application of the same to business and economic situations.

Course Contents:

Module I: Kinds of Progressions

Arithmetic Progressions (A.P.), Geometric progressions (G.P.) and Harmonic Progressions(H.P.) : Definition of A.P, G.P and H.P, Simple examples.

Module II: Compound Interest and Annuities

Certain different types of interest rates, Concept of present value and amount of a sum, Types of annuities, Present Value and amount of an annuity, including the case of continuous compounding; Valuation of simple loans and debentures, Problems relating sinking funds.

Module III: Set Theory

Set, Subset, Types of sets operations on sets venn diagram, Demorgan's Laws, Applications of set theory, Laws of indices.

Module IV: Matrices and Determinants

Matrices and determinants : Definition of a matrix, Types of matrices, Algebra of matrices, Properties of determinants, Calculation of values of determinants upto third order, Adjoint of a matrix, Finding inverse of a matrix, Rank of a matrix, Solution of system of linear equations by Cramer's Rule and Matrix Inverse Method (including not more than three variables).

Module V: Linear Programming Problem (L.P.P.)

Formulation of L.P.P., Graphical method of solution, Problems relating to two variables including the case of mixed constraints, Cases having no solution, Multiple solutions, Unbounded Solution.

Module VI: Function of Real Variables

Function of real variables, Linear, Quadratic, Exponential, Logarithmic and Inverse functions and their graphs, Illustrative examples, Limit of a function: Theorems on Limit (without proof), Simple examples.

Module VII: Differentiation

Definition, Derivative using first principle, Method of Differentiation of sum, Difference, Product and quotient of two functions, Derivative of composite, Inverse, Exponential, Logarithmic, Parametric and implicit functions; Second order derivative.

Module VIII: Maxima and Minima

Case of one variable involving second order derivative, Average cost, Average revenue functions, Marginal cost, Marginal revenue, Elasticity of demand.

Module IX: Integration

Integration: Integration as anti-derivative process, Standard forms, Method of integration by substitution, by parts and by use of partial fractions, Definite integral and their properties, Finding areas in simple cases, Determination of Cost, Revenue and demand function, Consumer's surplus and Producer's surplus.

FAMILY LAW - I

Course Code: BCL 303

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

This Course aims at providing adequate Sociological perspective so that the basic concepts relating to family are expounded in their social setting. It strives to give an overview of some of the current problems arising out of the foundational inequalities in the various family concepts. Another objective of the course is to view family law not merely as a separate system of personal laws based upon religions but as the one cutting across the religious lines and eventually enabling us to fulfill the constitutional directive of uniform civil code at least jurisprudentially at the academic study by identifying the core concepts in marriage laws of all communities to evolve a uniform civil code devoid of political nest. Women and children have special family relations and, therefore, it is aspired to develop insights amongst the students to ensure protection of constitutional rights of women and children in family law administration. In view of the conflicts of the interpersonal laws, conversion is causing problems. How conversion affects the family and whether it is compatible with the concept of secularism and to what extent such problem would stand resolved with the enactment of a uniform civil code, are some of the basics that needs to be examined.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

Course Code: BCL 405

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

Administrative law is as old as the administration itself. However, the form in which we find it today, Administrative is described a most outstanding legal development of the twentieth century. The reason for this development can only be attributed to a change of philosophy as regards the role and function of the State. The change in the concept of State from 'laissez faire' to a 'welfare state' has led to emergence of state activities in almost all spheres of human life. With the phenomenal increase in the area of state operation, the State was bound to take over a number of functions which were earlier left to private enterprise. In order to ensure that such functions are performed effectively and further due to certain other factors namely contingency, expertise etc. administrative agencies are given extraordinary powers and functions such as to make rules and deciding disputes apart from its wide discretionary powers. Obviously, this necessitated a new set of laws to check the possible abuses of such extraordinary powers on the part of administration. The courts in India and abroad in the course of time have developed various doctrines and methods to deal with such p[roblems. However, there is no end to this journey. The field is still open for new changes.

The main thrust of administrative law has been to study the nature of functions and powers exercised by the authorities on whom they have been conferred on and the study of remedies available to common man in case the limits of exercising power are transferred by such an authority. The focus or the centre point of this study, as usual as in cases of the study of other branches of public law, is the rights of individual wis a wis the public interest.

Course Contents:

Module I: Evolution, Nature and scope of Administrative law

Definitions, scope, classification and reason for the growth of administrative law; Relationship between constitutional law and administrative law; doctrine of Separation of Powers and its application in administrative law; Doctrine of Rule of law and application in administrative law.

Module II: Legislative function of Administration

Module III: Judicial function of Administration

Reason for Administrative adjudication; Tribunals and classification of Tribunals; Principles of Natural Justice; Ombudsman: Lokpal, Lokayukta; Central Vigilance Commission (CVC).

Module IV: Administrative discretion

Need and legality and abuses; Constitutional objections and discretion, failure to exercise discretion; Doctrine of proportionality; Legitimate expectation.

Module V: Judicial control of administrative action

Courts as the final authority to determine the legality of Administrative actions ; Public Interest Litigation and the principle of locus standi, laches, Judicial review ; scope and extent, statutory appeals, writs.

TAXATION LAW

Course Code: BCL 901

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

Power to tax has been described as the power to destroy. This idea is being floated often whenever the State introduces a new tax. Is this true? Is it not necessary that in order to raise revenue and place the economy on solid foundation, the taxing power should be conferred on the State? The power to tax shall not go unregulated. In this context of a federal structure the distribution of the taxing powers assumes added significance. Obviously, a study of the Constitutional framework on taxation becomes important. Along with this, an analysis of the different laws enacted in exercise of these powers with their safeguards and remedies sheds light on the mechanics of the taxation by the Union and the States.

Course Contents:

Module I: General Principles of Taxation Laws

History and Development of Tax Laws in India, Fundamental Principles relating to Tax Laws, Taxing power and constitutional limitations, Distinction between: Tax, Fee and Cess; Tax avoidance and Tax evasion .

Module II: Basic concepts of Income Tax

Income, Previous Year, assessment Year, Person, Assessee and Total Income, Income not included in the Total Income. Residential status, Clubbing of Income, Tax planning, Rate of Income Tax, Heads of Income, Salaries, Income from House Property, Income from Business or Profession, Capital Gains, Income from Other sources, Deductions under the Income Tax Act, 1961, Income Tax Authorities: Power and Functions, Filing of returns and procedure for assessment, Offences and Penal Sanctions .

Module III: Goods & Service Tax:

Genesis of GST in India, concept of GST, need for GST in India, GST vs VAT vs Service Tax, dual GST model, benefits of GST, constitutional amendment, taxable events of GST, relevant definitions, levy and collection of GST, recent amendments.

DISSERTATION

Course Code: BCL 1006

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

The objective of the dissertation is to enable students to undertake Doctrinal/Empirical Research to acquire an in depth understanding of the problem identified and to suggest legal solutions for the same

Guideline:

A project for dissertation culminates into a very important and final stage of a student's educational and learning processes at Amity Law School. This leads to the submission of innovative work of a high standard. A student is required to submit a statement on the theme that he/she would like to take up for research. The statement may cover the following points:

- Proposed title of the dissertation
- Problem identified for the research
- Rationale
- Objectives
- Research design
- Tentative chapaterisation
- Bibliography

The dissertation may have around 100 pages, neatly typed and hardbound.

Sequence of items in the dissertation

The following sequence may be followed in the preparation of a dissertation:

1. Cover page (on the hardbound cover)
2. Title page
3. Table of contents (with page numbers)
4. List of cases
5. List of abbreviations
6. List of tables (if any with each table title and page number)
7. Chapters
8. Major findings, conclusions and suggestions
9. Bibliography
11. Appendices (if any)

Detail guidelines for the dissertation:

The aim of the dissertation is to provide you with an opportunity to further your intellectual and personal development in your chosen field by undertaking a significant theoretical / practical unit of activity, having an educational value at a level commensurate with the award of your degree.

The dissertation can be defined as a scholarly inquiry into a problem or an issue, involving a systematic approach to gathering and analysis of information / data, leading to the writing of a structured report.

Selecting the dissertation topic:

It is usual to give you some discretion in the choice of topic for the dissertation and the approach to be adopted. You will need to ensure that your dissertation is related to your field of specialization. Deciding this is often the most difficult part of the dissertation process and perhaps you have been thinking of a topic for some time.

Normally we would expect a student to keep the following in view while choosing a topic:

- Relevance to the relationship between contemporary international law and international community
- Relate to concerned one or more of the subjects or areas of study within the core program and specialization stream
- Clarity in focus so as to facilitate an in depth approach, subject to the availability of adequate sources of information and to your own knowledge
- Being of value and interest to your personal and professional as also social development

Dissertation plan or outline:

It is recommended that you should have a dissertation plan to guide you right from the outset. Essentially, the dissertation plan is an outline of what you intend to do chapter wise and it should, therefore, reflect the aims and objectives of your dissertation.

There are several reasons for having a dissertation plan:

- It provides a focus to your thoughts.
- It provides your faculty guide with an opportunity, at an early stage of your work, to make constructive comments and to help provide the direction of your research.
- The writing of a plan is the first formal stage of the writing process and therefore, helps build up your confidence.
- In many ways, the plan encourages you to come to terms with the reading, thinking and writing in a systematic and integrated way, with plenty of time left for changes.

Finally, the dissertation plan generally provides a revision point in the development of your dissertation report in order to allow appropriate changes in the scope and even direction of your work as it progresses

Dissertation format:

- All students, while writing their dissertation, must follow rules as under:
- Front page should contain title, author, name of the degree/diploma, the name of the guide and the date of submission.
- Preface
- Acknowledgment
- Table of contents, giving page references for each chapter and section.
- List of cases, list of international norms and national laws, list of abbreviations, appendices, graphs and tables giving titles and page references.

- An abstract of the dissertation (approximately 500 words) titled: Summary.
- Chapter I should be a general introduction, giving the background to the dissertation, the objectives of the dissertation, the rationale for the dissertation, the plan, hypothesis, methodological issues and problems. Limitations, if any, may also be pointed out.
- Other chapters will constitute the main body of the dissertation. The number of chapters and their sequence will usually vary depending on, among others, a critical review of the previous relevant works relating to your major findings, a discussion of their implications and conclusions, possibly with a suggestion of the direction of future research in the area.
- After this concluding chapter, you should give a list of all the references you have used. These should be cross - references with your text. For articles from journals, the following examples may be kept in view: Claude Bruderle in, “People’s Security as a New Measure of GloBCL Stability,” 83 International Review of the Red Cross 353-367, pp. (2001) (International Committee for Red Cross, Geneva) For books, the following: Malcolm Shaw, International Law 367 (5th ed. 2003, reprint of low-priced ed. 2007) (Cambridge University Press, New Delhi) For edited books, the following: Richard Overy, “The Nuremberg Trials: International Law in the Making,” in Philippe Sands (ed), From Nuremberg to the Hague: The Future of International Criminal Justice 1 (2003) (Cambridge University Press, UK)
- Finally, you may give appendices which should only include relevant statistical data or material that cannot be fitted into the above categories.

The layout guidelines for dissertation:

- A4 size Paper
- Font: Arial (10 points) or Times New Roman (12 points)
- Line spacing: 1.5
- Top and bottom margins: 1 inch/ 2.5 cm; left and right margins: 1.25 inches/ 3 cm.

Assessment Scheme:

- Continuous evaluation (Marks 50): (Based on Abstract, Regularity, Adherence to initial plan, Records etc.)
- Final Evaluation (Marks 50)
 - Evaluation of dissertation -30
 - Presentation of research through a seminar -10
 - Viva voce based on dissertation -10

BEHAVIOURAL SCIENCE - I

(UNDERSTANDING SELF FOR EFFECTIVENESS)

Course Code: BCL 143

Credit Units: 01

Course Objective:

This course aims at imparting an understanding of:

- Understanding self & process of self exploration
- Learning strategies for development of a healthy self esteem
- Importance of attitudes and its effective on personality
- Building Emotional Competency

Pre requisites: Nill

Course Contents:

Module I: Self: Core Competency (2 Hours)

- Understanding of Self
- Components of Self – Self identity
- Self concept
- Self confidence
- Self image

Module II: Techniques of Self Awareness (2 Hours)

- Exploration through Johari Window
- Mapping the key characteristics of self
- Framing a charter for self
- Stages – self awareness, self acceptance and self realization

Module III: Self Esteem & Effectiveness (2 Hours)

- Meaning
- Importance
- Components of self esteem
- High and low self esteem
- Measuring your self esteem

Module IV: Building Positive Attitude (2 Hours)

- Meaning and nature of attitude
- Components and Types of attitude
- Importance and relevance of attitude

Module V: Building Emotional Competence (2 Hours)

- Emotional Intelligence – Meaning, components, Importance and Relevance
- Positive and negative emotions
- Healthy and Unhealthy expression of emotions

Module VI: End-of-Semester Appraisal (2 Hours)

- Viva - Voce based on personal journal
- Assessment of Behavioral change as a result of training

- Exit Level Rating by Self and Observer

Student Learning Outcomes:

After completing this paper students:

- would be aware of the importance of understanding of self and self confidence.
- would get acquainted with the importance and impact of self esteem, self awareness and positive attitude.
- would be apprised with the basics of positive attitude and building of emotional competence.

Course Code: BCL 201

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

The objective of this paper is to make the student to understand how the business organizations work by applying economic principles in their business management. The course will attempt to relate theory to practice and try to instill in students the ability to apply basic microeconomic concepts to the understanding of everyday phenomena.

Pre-requisites: 10+2

Course Contents:

Module I: Nature and Scope of Economics

Difference between micro and macroeconomics, Nature of economic problem, Basic postulates, Role of price mechanism, Theory of Demand and Analysis: Demand, Demand determinants, Law of demand, Characteristics exceptions, Elasticity of demand, Price elasticity, Types, Determining factors, Change in demand and elasticity of demand, Business applications of price elasticity, Concepts of income and cross elasticity of demand., Measurement of price elasticity of demand by total outlay method.

Module II: Consumer Behaviour

Consumer sovereignty, Limitations; Approaches to the study of consumer behaviour: Cardinal approach, The law of equi-marginal utility, Ordinal approach, Indifference curve analysis, Properties; Consumer surplus, Meaning, Analysis limitations, Price, Income and substitution effects, Giffen goods, Engel curve.

Module III: Theory of Production and Cost

Concept of Production Function, Isoquants, Marginal rate of technical substitution, Law of variable proportions, The concepts of firm and industry, Revenue and cost curves: Short and long run, Equilibrium of the firm.

Module IV: Market Structures and Business Decisions

Objectives of Business firm: Perfect Competition, Profit maximization and equilibrium of firm and industry, Short run and long run supply curves, Price and output determination; Practical Applications: Monopoly, Determination of price under monopoly, Equilibrium of a firm , Comparison between perfect competition and monopoly; Multi Plant monopoly, Price Discrimination, Practical applications; Monopolistic Competition: Meaning and characteristics, Price and output Determination under monopolistic competition, Excess capacity under monopolistic competition; Oligopoly : Characteristics, Indeterminate pricing and output, Classical models of Oligopoly, Price leadership, Collusive oligopoly, Kinked demand curve.

Module V: Factor Pricing - I

Module VI: Factor Pricing - II

Interests: Concept and theories of interest: Loan able Fund Theory, Liquidity Preference Theory; Profit : Concepts and Theories of Profit , Innovation Theory, Dynamic Theory, Risk Theory and Uncertainty Bearing Theory.

Examination Scheme:

Components	P/S/V	CT	A	C	EE
Weightage (%)	10	10	5	5	70

Student Learning Outcomes:

At the end of the course student will able to:

- Understand the application of economic principles in business management.
- relate theory to practice and try to instill in students the ability to apply basic microeconomic concepts to the understanding of everyday phenomena.

BUSINESS MATHEMATICS

Course Code: BCL 202

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

To familiarize the students with basic mathematical tools and the application of the same to business and economic situations.

Pre-requisites:

The student has the basic idea of business.

Course Contents:

Module I: Kinds of Progressions

Arithmetic Progressions (A.P.), Geometric progressions (G.P.) and Harmonic Progressions(H.P.) : Definition of A.P, G.P and H.P, Simple examples.

Module II: Compound Interest and Annuities

Certain different types of interest rates, Concept of present value and amount of a sum, Types of annuities, Present Value and amount of an annuity, including the case of continuous compounding; Valuation of simple loans and debentures, Problems relating sinking funds.

Module III: Set Theory

Set, Subset, Types of sets operations on sets venn diagram, Demorgan's Laws, Applications of set theory, Laws of indices.

Module IV: Matrices and Determinants

Matrices and determinants : Definition of a matrix, Types of matrices, Algebra of matrices, Properties of determinants, Calculation of values of determinants upto third order, Adjoint of a matrix, Finding inverse of a matrix, Rank of a matrix, Solution of system of linear equations by Cramer's Rule and Matrix Inverse Method (including not more than three variables).

Module V: Linear Programming Problem (L.P.P.)

Formulation of L.P.P., Graphical method of solution, Problems relating to two variables including the case of mixed constraints, Cases having no solution, Multiple solutions, Unbounded Solution.

Module VI: Function of Real Variables

Function of real variables, Linear, Quadratic, Exponential, Logarithmic and Inverse functions and their graphs, Illustrative examples, Limit of a function: Theorems on Limit (without proof), Simple examples.

Module VII: Differentiation

Definition, Derivative using first principle, Method of Differentiation of sum, Difference, Product and quotient of two functions, Derivative of composite, Inverse, Exponential, Logarithmic, Parametric and implicit functions; Second order derivative.

Module VIII: Maxima and Minima

Case of one variable involving second order derivative, Average cost, Average revenue functions, Marginal cost, Marginal revenue, Elasticity of demand.

Module IX: Integration

Integration: Integration as anti-derivative process, Standard forms, Method of integration by substitution, by parts and by use of partial fractions, Definite integral and their properties, Finding areas in simple cases, Determination of Cost, Revenue and demand function, Consumer's surplus and Producer's surplus.

Examination Scheme:

Components	P/S/V	CT	C	A	EE
Weightage (%)	10	10	5	05	70

Student Learning Outcomes:

At the end of the course student will be familiarize the students with basic mathematical tools and the application of the same to business and economic situations.

ENVIRONMENTAL STUDIES-II

Course Code: BCL242

Credit Units: 02

Course Contents:

Module I: Environmental Pollution

Definition, causes, effects and control measures of:

- a. Air pollution
- b. Water pollution
- c. Soil pollution
- d. Marine pollution
- e. Noise pollution
- f. Thermal pollution
- g. Nuclear pollution

Solid waste management: Causes, effects and control measures of urban and industrial wastes. Role of an individual in prevention of pollution. Pollution case studies. Disaster management: floods, earthquake, cyclone and landslides.

Module II: Social Issues and the Environment

From unsustainable to sustainable development, Urban problems and related to energy, Water conservation, rain water harvesting, watershed management

Resettlement and rehabilitation of people; its problems and concerns Case studies.

Environmental ethics: Issues and possible solutions

Climate change, Global warming, Acid rain, Ozone layer depletion, Nuclear Accidents and Holocaust case studies.

Fireworks/Crackers – Introduction, ill effects on environment and humans.

Wasteland reclamation, Consumerism and waste products, Environmental Protection Act, Air (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, Water (Prevention and control of Pollution) Act, Wildlife Protection Act, Forest Conservation Act

Issues involved in enforcement of environmental legislation Public awareness

Module III: Human Population and the Environment

Population growth, variation among nations

Population explosion – Family Welfare Programmes

Environment and human health

Human Rights

Value Education

HIV / AIDS

Women and Child Welfare

Role of Information Technology in Environment and Human Health

Case Studies

Module IV: Field Work

Visit to a local area to document environmental assets-river / forest/ grassland/ hill/ mountain. Visit to a local polluted site – Urban / Rural / Industrial / Agricultural. Study of common plants, insects, birds. Study of simple ecosystems-pond, river, hill slopes, etc (Field work equal to 5 lecture hours)

Examination Scheme:

BEHAVIOURAL SCIENCE - II

(INDIVIDUAL, SOCIETY AND NATION)

Course Code: BCL 243

Credit Units: 01

Course Objective:

This course aims at enabling students towards:

- Understand the importance of individual differences
- Better understanding of self in relation to society and nation
- Facilitation for a meaningful existence and adjustment in society
- Inculcating patriotism and national pride

Pre requisites: 10+2

Course Contents:

Module I: Individual differences & Personality (2 Hours)

- Personality: Definition & Relevance
- Importance of nature & nurture in Personality Development
- Importance and Recognition of Individual differences in Personality
- Accepting and Managing Individual differences
- Intuition, Judgment, Perception & Sensation (MBTI)
- BIG5 Factors

Module II: Managing Diversity (2 Hours)

- Defining Diversity
- Affirmation Action and Managing Diversity
- Increasing Diversity in Work Force
- Barriers and Challenges in Managing Diversity

Module III: Socialization (2 Hours)

- Nature of Socialization
- Social Interaction
- Interaction of Socialization Process
- Contributions to Society and Nation

FAMILY LAW - I

Course Code: BCL 303

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

This Course aims at providing adequate Sociological perspective so that the basic concepts relating to family are expounded in their social setting. It strives to give an overview of some of the current problems arising out of the foundational inequalities in the various family concepts. Another objective of the course is to view family law not merely as a separate system of personal laws based upon religions but as the one cutting across the religious lines and eventually enabling us to fulfill the constitutional directive of uniform civil code at least jurisprudentially at the academic study by identifying the core concepts in marriage laws of all communities to evolve a uniform civil code devoid of political nest. Women and children have special family relations and, therefore, it is aspired to develop insights amongst the students to ensure protection of constitutional rights of women and children in family law administration. In view of the conflicts of the interpersonal laws, conversion is causing problems. How conversion affects the family and whether it is compatible with the concept of secularism and to what extent such problem would stand resolved with the enactment of a uniform civil code, are some of the basics that needs to be examined.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

Course Code: BCL 405

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

Administrative law is as old as the administration itself. However, the form in which we find it today, Administrative is described a most outstanding legal development of the twentieth century. The reason for this development can only be attributed to a change of philosophy as regards the role and function of the State. The change in the concept of State from 'laissez faire' to a 'welfare state' has led to emergence of state activities in almost all spheres of human life. With the phenomenal increase in the area of state operation, the State was bound to take over a number of functions which were earlier left to private enterprise. In order to ensure that such functions are performed effectively and further due to certain other factors namely contingency, expertise etc. administrative agencies are given extraordinary powers and functions such as to make rules and deciding disputes apart from its wide discretionary powers. Obviously, this necessitated a new set of laws to check the possible abuses of such extraordinary powers on the part of administration. The courts in India and abroad in the course of time have developed various doctrines and methods to deal with such p[roblems. However, there is no end to this journey. The field is still open for new changes.

The main thrust of administrative law has been to study the nature of functions and powers exercised by the authorities on whom they have been conferred on and the study of remedies available to common man in case the limits of exercising power are transferred by such an authority. The focus or the centre point of this study, as usual as in cases of the study of other branches of public law, is the rights of individual wis a wis the public interest.

TAXATION LAW

Course Code: BCL 901

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

Power to tax has been described as the power to destroy. This idea is being floated often whenever the State introduces a new tax. Is this true? Is it not necessary that in order to raise revenue and place the economy on solid foundation, the taxing power should be conferred on the State? The power to tax shall not go unregulated. In this context of a federal structure the distribution of the taxing powers assumes added significance. Obviously, a study of the Constitutional framework on taxation becomes important. Along with this, an analysis of the different laws enacted in exercise of these powers with their safeguards and remedies sheds light on the mechanics of the taxation by the Union and the States.

Prerequisites:

Basic knowledge of History concerning taxation and Development of Tax Laws in India

Course Contents:

Module I: General Principles of Taxation Laws

History and Development of Tax Laws in India, Fundamental Principles relating to Tax Laws, Taxing power and constitutional limitations, Distinction between: Tax, Fee and Cess; Tax avoidance and Tax evasion .

Module II: Basic concepts of Income Tax

Income, Previous Year, assessment Year, Person, Assessee and Total Income, Income not included in the Total Income. Residential status, Clubbing of Income, Tax planning, Rate of Income Tax, Heads of Income, Salaries, Income from House Property, Income from Business or Profession, Capital Gains, Income from Other sources, Deductions under the Income Tax Act, 1961, Income Tax Authorities: Power and Functions, Filing of returns and procedure for assessment, Offences and Penal Sanctions .

Module III: Goods & Service Tax:

Genesis of GST in India, concept of GST, need for GST in India, GST vs VAT vs Service Tax, dual GST model, benefits of GST, constitutional amendment, taxable events of GST, relevant definitions, levy and collection of GST, recent amendments.

Examination Scheme:

Components	P/S/V	CT	C	A	EE
Weightage (%)	10	10	5	5	70

Student Learning Outcomes:

- To ensure all newly qualified law graduates have the technical and professional skills in tax laws to begin their career and from which to build their ongoing professional development.
- Aims to provide students with the technical skills and underpinning knowledge to perform their work as an advocate in a variety of Tax environments.
- To act as consultant in public sector and/or other corporate sectors on the matters concerning taxation.

DISSERTATION

Course Code: BCL 1006

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

The objective of the dissertation is to enable students to undertake Doctrinal/Empirical Research to acquire an in depth understanding of the problem identified and to suggest legal solutions for the same

Guideline:

A project for dissertation culminates into a very important and final stage of a student's educational and learning processes at Amity Law School. This leads to the submission of innovative work of a high standard. A student is required to submit a statement on the theme that he/she would like to take up for research. The statement may cover the following points:

- Proposed title of the dissertation
- Problem identified for the research
- Rationale
- Objectives
- Research design
- Tentative chapaterisation
- Bibliography

The dissertation may have around 100 pages, neatly typed and hardbound.

Sequence of items in the dissertation

The following sequence may be followed in the preparation of a dissertation:

1. Cover page (on the hardbound cover)
2. Title page
3. Table of contents (with page numbers)
4. List of cases
5. List of abbreviations
6. List of tables (if any with each table title and page number)
7. Chapters
8. Major findings, conclusions and suggestions
9. Bibliography
11. Appendices (if any)

Detail guidelines for the dissertation:

The aim of the dissertation is to provide you with an opportunity to further your intellectual and personal development in your chosen field by undertaking a significant theoretical / practical unit of activity, having an educational value at a level commensurate with the award of your degree.

The dissertation can be defined as a scholarly inquiry into a problem or an issue, involving a systematic approach to gathering and analysis of information / data, leading to the writing of a structured report.

Selecting the dissertation topic:

It is usual to give you some discretion in the choice of topic for the dissertation and the approach to be adopted. You will need to ensure that your dissertation is related to your field of specialization. Deciding this is often the most difficult part of the dissertation process and perhaps you have been thinking of a topic for some time.

Normally we would expect a student to keep the following in view while choosing a topic:

- Relevance to the relationship between contemporary international law and international community
- Relate to concerned one or more of the subjects or areas of study within the core program and specialization stream
- Clarity in focus so as to facilitate an in depth approach, subject to the availability of adequate sources of information and to your own knowledge
- Being of value and interest to your personal and professional as also social development

Dissertation plan or outline:

It is recommended that you should have a dissertation plan to guide you right from the outset. Essentially, the dissertation plan is an outline of what you intend to do chapter wise and it should, therefore, reflect the aims and objectives of your dissertation.

There are several reasons for having a dissertation plan:

- It provides a focus to your thoughts.
- It provides your faculty guide with an opportunity, at an early stage of your work, to make constructive comments and to help provide the direction of your research.
- The writing of a plan is the first formal stage of the writing process and therefore, helps build up your confidence.
- In many ways, the plan encourages you to come to terms with the reading, thinking and writing in a systematic and integrated way, with plenty of time left for changes.

Finally, the dissertation plan generally provides a revision point in the development of your dissertation report in order to allow appropriate changes in the scope and even direction of your work as it progresses

Dissertation format:

- All students, while writing their dissertation, must follow rules as under:
- Front page should contain title, author, name of the degree/diploma, the name of the guide and the date of submission.
- Preface
- Acknowledgment
- Table of contents, giving page references for each chapter and section.
- List of cases, list of international norms and national laws, list of abbreviations, appendices, graphs and tables giving titles and page references.
- An abstract of the dissertation (approximately 500 words) titled: Summary.

- Chapter I should be a general introduction, giving the background to the dissertation, the objectives of the dissertation, the rationale for the dissertation, the plan, hypothesis, methodological issues and problems. Limitations, if any, may also be pointed out.
- Other chapters will constitute the main body of the dissertation. The number of chapters and their sequence will usually vary depending on, among others, a critical review of the previous relevant works relating to your major findings, a discussion of their implications and conclusions, possibly with a suggestion of the direction of future research in the area.
- After this concluding chapter, you should give a list of all the references you have used. These should be cross - references with your text. For articles from journals, the following examples may be kept in view: Claude Bruderle in, “People’s Security as a New Measure of Global Stability,” 83 International Review of the Red Cross 353-367, pp. (2001) (International Committee for Red Cross, Geneva) For books, the following: Malcolm Shaw, International Law 367 (5th ed. 2003, reprint of low-priced ed. 2007) (Cambridge University Press, New Delhi) For edited books, the following: Richard Overy, “The Nuremberg Trials: International Law in the Making,” in Philippe Sands (ed), From Nuremberg to the Hague: The Future of International Criminal Justice 1 (2003) (Cambridge University Press, UK)
- Finally, you may give appendices which should only include relevant statistical data or material that cannot be fitted into the above categories.

The layout guidelines for dissertation:

- A4 size Paper
- Font: Arial (10 points) or Times New Roman (12 points)
- Line spacing: 1.5
- Top and bottom margins: 1 inch/ 2.5 cm; left and right margins: 1.25 inches/ 3 cm.

Assessment Scheme:

- Continuous evaluation (Marks 50): (Based on Abstract, Regularity, Adherence to initial plan, Records etc.)
- Final Evaluation (Marks 50)
 - Evaluation of dissertation -30
 - Presentation of research through a seminar -10
 - Viva voce based on dissertation -10

Land resources: Land as a resource, land degradation, man induced landslides, soil erosion and desertification.

Role of an individual in conservation of natural resources.

Equitable use of resources for sustainable lifestyles.

Module III: Ecosystems

Concept of an ecosystem, Structure and function of an ecosystem, Producers, consumers and decomposers, Energy flow in the ecosystem, Ecological succession

Food chains, food webs and ecological pyramids

Introduction, types, characteristic features, structure and function of the following ecosystem:

- a. Forest ecosystem
- b. Grassland ecosystem
- c. Desert ecosystem
- d. Aquatic ecosystems (ponds, streams, lakes, rivers, ocean estuaries)

Module IV: Biodiversity and its conservation

Introduction – Definition: genetic, species and ecosystem diversity

Biogeographical classification of India

Value of biodiversity: consumptive use, productive use, social, ethical aesthetic and option values Biodiversity at global, national and local levels

India as a mega-diversity nation, Hot-spots of biodiversity

Threats to biodiversity: habitat loss, poaching of wildlife, man wildlife conflicts, Endangered and endemic species of India

Conservation of biodiversity: In-situ and Ex-situ conservation of biodiversity

Examination Scheme:

Components	CT	HA	S/V/Q	A	ESE
Weightage (%)	15	10	20	5	50

Student Learning Outcomes:

After completion of this paper students will be well versed with:

- The students would be aware of the importance of environment as an area of study.
- The students would get acquainted with the importance and impact of major present environmental issues.
- The student would be apprised with the basics of environmental law and current regime in india.
- The learning from the judgemnts of supreme court cases would expose them to the practical applicability of laws and issues concerning Environment.

BEHAVIOURAL SCIENCE - I

(UNDERSTANDING SELF FOR EFFECTIVENESS)

Course Code: BSU 143

Credit Units: 01

Course Objective:

This course aims at imparting an understanding of:

- Understanding self & process of self exploration
- Learning strategies for development of a healthy self esteem
- Importance of attitudes and its effective on personality
- Building Emotional Competency

Pre requisites: Nill

Course Contents:

Module I: Self: Core Competency (2 Hours)

- Understanding of Self
- Components of Self – Self identity
- Self concept
- Self confidence
- Self image

Module II: Techniques of Self Awareness (2 Hours)

- Exploration through Johari Window
- Mapping the key characteristics of self
- Framing a charter for self
- Stages – self awareness, self acceptance and self realization

Module III: Self Esteem & Effectiveness (2 Hours)

- Meaning
- Importance
- Components of self esteem
- High and low self esteem
- Measuring your self esteem

Module IV: Building Positive Attitude (2 Hours)

- Meaning and nature of attitude
- Components and Types of attitude
- Importance and relevance of attitude

Module V: Building Emotional Competence (2 Hours)

- Emotional Intelligence – Meaning, components, Importance and Relevance
- Positive and negative emotions
- Healthy and Unhealthy expression of emotions

Module VI: End-of-Semester Appraisal (2 Hours)

- Viva - Voce based on personal journal
- Assessment of Behavioral change as a result of training

- Exit Level Rating by Self and Observer

Student Learning Outcomes:

After completing this paper students:

- would be aware of the importance of understanding of self and self confidence.
- would get acquainted with the importance and impact of self esteem, self awareness and positive attitude.
- would be apprised with the basics of positive attitude and building of emotional competence.

FRENCH – I

Course Code: FLU 144

Credit Units: 02

Course Objective:

To familiarize students with the French language, with its phonetic system and its accents.

To enable students

- to greet someone in French
- to present and describe oneself and people
- to enter in contact, and begin a conversation
- to talk about one's family, tastes and preferences

Course Contents:

Dossiers 1, 2 – pg 5-24

Dossier 1 : Toi, moi, nous

Actes de Communication :

S'adresser poliment à quelqu'un, entrer en contact, se présenter, présenter quelqu'un, saluer, poser des questions

simples pour connaître quelqu'un, épeler et compter

Dossier 2 : En famille

Actes de Communication :

Parler de sa famille, Décrire quelqu'un, exprimer ses goûts, écrire et comprendre un message court, inviter

quelqu'un, exprimer la possession, la négation

Course Code: BCH 206

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

The objective of this paper is to make the student to understand how the business organizations work by applying economic principles in their business management. The course will attempt to relate theory to practice and try to instill in students the ability to apply basic microeconomic concepts to the understanding of everyday phenomena.

Pre-requisites: 10+2

Course Contents:

Module I: Nature and Scope of Economics

Difference between micro and macroeconomics, Nature of economic problem, Basic postulates, Role of price mechanism, Theory of Demand and Analysis: Demand, Demand determinants, Law of demand, Characteristics exceptions, Elasticity of demand, Price elasticity, Types, Determining factors, Change in demand and elasticity of demand, Business applications of price elasticity, Concepts of income and cross elasticity of demand., Measurement of price elasticity of demand by total outlay method.

Module II: Consumer Behaviour

Consumer sovereignty, Limitations; Approaches to the study of consumer behaviour: Cardinal approach, The law of equi-marginal utility, Ordinal approach, Indifference curve analysis, Properties; Consumer surplus, Meaning, Analysis limitations, Price, Income and substitution effects, Giffen goods, Engel curve.

Module III: Theory of Production and Cost

Concept of Production Function, Isoquants, Marginal rate of technical substitution, Law of variable proportions, The concepts of firm and industry, Revenue and cost curves: Short and long run, Equilibrium of the firm.

Module IV: Market Structures and Business Decisions

Objectives of Business firm: Perfect Competition, Profit maximization and equilibrium of firm and industry, Short run and long run supply curves, Price and output determination; Practical Applications: Monopoly, Determination of price under monopoly, Equilibrium of a firm , Comparison between perfect competition and monopoly; Multi Plant monopoly, Price Discrimination, Practical applications; Monopolistic Competition: Meaning and characteristics, Price and output Determination under monopolistic competition, Excess capacity under monopolistic competition; Oligopoly : Characteristics, Indeterminate pricing and output, Classical models of Oligopoly, Price leadership, Collusive oligopoly, Kinked demand curve.

Module V: Factor Pricing - I

Module VI: Factor Pricing - II

Interests: Concept and theories of interest: Loan able Fund Theory, Liquidity Preference Theory; Profit : Concepts and Theories of Profit , Innovation Theory, Dynamic Theory, Risk Theory and Uncertainty Bearing Theory.

Examination Scheme:

Components	P/S/V	CT	A	C	EE
Weightage (%)	10	10	5	5	70

Student Learning Outcomes:

At the end of the course student will able to:

- Understand the application of economic principles in business management.
- relate theory to practice and try to instill in students the ability to apply basic microeconomic concepts to the understanding of everyday phenomena.

BUSINESS MATHEMATICS

Course Code: BCL 202

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

To familiarize the students with basic mathematical tools and the application of the same to business and economic situations.

Pre-requisites:

The student has the basic idea of business.

Course Contents:

Module I: Kinds of Progressions

Arithmetic Progressions (A.P.), Geometric progressions (G.P.) and Harmonic Progressions(H.P.) : Definition of A.P, G.P and H.P, Simple examples.

Module II: Compound Interest and Annuities

Certain different types of interest rates, Concept of present value and amount of a sum, Types of annuities, Present Value and amount of an annuity, including the case of continuous compounding; Valuation of simple loans and debentures, Problems relating sinking funds.

Module III: Set Theory

Set, Subset, Types of sets operations on sets venn diagram, Demorgan's Laws, Applications of set theory, Laws of indices.

Module IV: Matrices and Determinants

Matrices and determinants : Definition of a matrix, Types of matrices, Algebra of matrices, Properties of determinants, Calculation of values of determinants upto third order, Adjoint of a matrix, Finding inverse of a matrix, Rank of a matrix, Solution of system of linear equations by Cramer's Rule and Matrix Inverse Method (including not more than three variables).

Module V: Linear Programming Problem (L.P.P.)

Formulation of L.P.P., Graphical method of solution, Problems relating to two variables including the case of mixed constraints, Cases having no solution, Multiple solutions, Unbounded Solution.

Module VI: Function of Real Variables

Function of real variables, Linear, Quadratic, Exponential, Logarithmic and Inverse functions and their graphs, Illustrative examples, Limit of a function: Theorems on Limit (without proof), Simple examples.

Module VII: Differentiation

Definition, Derivative using first principle, Method of Differentiation of sum, Difference, Product and quotient of two functions, Derivative of composite, Inverse, Exponential, Logarithmic, Parametric and implicit functions; Second order derivative.

Module VIII: Maxima and Minima

Case of one variable involving second order derivative, Average cost, Average revenue functions, Marginal cost, Marginal revenue, Elasticity of demand.

Module IX: Integration

Integration: Integration as anti-derivative process, Standard forms, Method of integration by substitution, by parts and by use of partial fractions, Definite integral and their properties, Finding areas in simple cases, Determination of Cost, Revenue and demand function, Consumer's surplus and Producer's surplus.

Examination Scheme:

Components	P/S/V	CT	C	A	EE
Weightage (%)	10	10	5	05	70

Student Learning Outcomes:

At the end of the course student will be familiarize the students with basic mathematical tools and the application of the same to business and economic situations.

ENVIRONMENTAL STUDIES-II

Course Code: EVS 242

Credit Units: 02

Course Contents:

Module I: Environmental Pollution

Definition, causes, effects and control measures of:

- a. Air pollution
- b. Water pollution
- c. Soil pollution
- d. Marine pollution
- e. Noise pollution
- f. Thermal pollution
- g. Nuclear pollution

Solid waste management: Causes, effects and control measures of urban and industrial wastes. Role of an individual in prevention of pollution. Pollution case studies. Disaster management: floods, earthquake, cyclone and landslides.

Module II: Social Issues and the Environment

From unsustainable to sustainable development, Urban problems and related to energy, Water conservation, rain water harvesting, watershed management

Resettlement and rehabilitation of people; its problems and concerns Case studies.

Environmental ethics: Issues and possible solutions

Climate change, Global warming, Acid rain, Ozone layer depletion, Nuclear Accidents and Holocaust case studies.

Fireworks/Crackers – Introduction, ill effects on environment and humans.

Wasteland reclamation, Consumerism and waste products, Environmental Protection Act, Air (Prevention and Control of Pollution) Act, Water (Prevention and control of Pollution) Act, Wildlife Protection Act, Forest Conservation Act

Issues involved in enforcement of environmental legislation Public awareness

Module III: Human Population and the Environment

Population growth, variation among nations

Population explosion – Family Welfare Programmes

Environment and human health

Human Rights

Value Education

HIV / AIDS

Women and Child Welfare

Role of Information Technology in Environment and Human Health

Case Studies

Module IV: Field Work

Visit to a local area to document environmental assets-river / forest/ grassland/ hill/ mountain. Visit to a local polluted site – Urban / Rural / Industrial / Agricultural. Study of common plants, insects, birds. Study of simple ecosystems-pond, river, hill slopes, etc (Field work equal to 5 lecture hours)

Examination Scheme:

FAMILY LAW - I

Course Code: BCL 303

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

This Course aims at providing adequate Sociological perspective so that the basic concepts relating to family are expounded in their social setting. It strives to give an overview of some of the current problems arising out of the foundational inequalities in the various family concepts. Another objective of the course is to view family law not merely as a separate system of personal laws based upon religions but as the one cutting across the religious lines and eventually enabling us to fulfill the constitutional directive of uniform civil code at least jurisprudentially at the academic study by identifying the core concepts in marriage laws of all communities to evolve a uniform civil code devoid of political nest. Women and children have special family relations and, therefore, it is aspired to develop insights amongst the students to ensure protection of constitutional rights of women and children in family law administration. In view of the conflicts of the interpersonal laws, conversion is causing problems. How conversion affects the family and whether it is compatible with the concept of secularism and to what extent such problem would stand resolved with the enactment of a uniform civil code, are some of the basics that needs to be examined.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

Course Code: BCL 405

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

Administrative law is as old as the administration itself. However, the form in which we find it today, Administrative is described a most outstanding legal development of the twentieth century. The reason for this development can only be attributed to a change of philosophy as regards the role and function of the State. The change in the concept of State from 'laissez faire' to a 'welfare state' has led to emergence of state activities in almost all spheres of human life. With the phenomenal increase in the area of state operation, the State was bound to take over a number of functions which were earlier left to private enterprise. In order to ensure that such functions are performed effectively and further due to certain other factors namely contingency, expertise etc. administrative agencies are given extraordinary powers and functions such as to make rules and deciding disputes apart from its wide discretionary powers. Obviously, this necessitated a new set of laws to check the possible abuses of such extraordinary powers on the part of administration. The courts in India and abroad in the course of time have developed various doctrines and methods to deal with such p[roblems. However, there is no end to this journey. The field is still open for new changes.

The main thrust of administrative law has been to study the nature of functions and powers exercised by the authorities on whom they have been conferred on and the study of remedies available to common man in case the limits of exercising power are transferred by such an authority. The focus or the centre point of this study, as usual as in cases of the study of other branches of public law, is the rights of individual wis a wis the public interest.

TAXATION LAW

Course Code: BCL 901

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

Power to tax has been described as the power to destroy. This idea is being floated often whenever the State introduces a new tax. Is this true? Is it not necessary that in order to raise revenue and place the economy on solid foundation, the taxing power should be conferred on the State? The power to tax shall not go unregulated. In this context of a federal structure the distribution of the taxing powers assumes added significance. Obviously, a study of the Constitutional framework on taxation becomes important. Along with this, an analysis of the different laws enacted in exercise of these powers with their safeguards and remedies sheds light on the mechanics of the taxation by the Union and the States.

Prerequisites:

Basic knowledge of History concerning taxation and Development of Tax Laws in India

Course Contents:

Module I: General Principles of Taxation Laws

History and Development of Tax Laws in India, Fundamental Principles relating to Tax Laws, Taxing power and constitutional limitations, Distinction between: Tax, Fee and Cess; Tax avoidance and Tax evasion .

Module II: Basic concepts of Income Tax

Income, Previous Year, assessment Year, Person, Assesee and Total Income, Income not included in the Total Income. Residential status, Clubbing of Income, Tax planning, Rate of Income Tax, Heads of Income, Salaries, Income from House Property, Income from Business or Profession, Capital Gains, Income from Other sources, Deductions under the Income Tax Act, 1961, Income Tax Authorities: Power and Functions, Filing of returns and procedure for assessment, Offences and Penal Sanctions .

Module III: Goods & Service Tax:

Genesis of GST in India, concept of GST, need for GST in India, GST vs VAT vs Service Tax, dual GST model, benefits of GST, constitutional amendment, taxable events of GST, relevant definitions, levy and collection of GST, recent amendments.

Examination Scheme:

Components	P/S/V	CT	C	A	EE
Weightage (%)	10	10	5	5	70

Student Learning Outcomes:

- To ensure all newly qualified law graduates have the technical and professional skills in tax laws to begin their career and from which to build their ongoing professional development.
- Aims to provide students with the technical skills and underpinning knowledge to perform their work as an advocate in a variety of Tax environments.
- To act as consultant in public sector and/or other corporate sectors on the matters concerning taxation.

DISSERTATION

Course Code: BCL 1006

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

The objective of the dissertation is to enable students to undertake Doctrinal/Empirical Research to acquire an in depth understanding of the problem identified and to suggest legal solutions for the same

Guideline:

A project for dissertation culminates into a very important and final stage of a student's educational and learning processes at Amity Law School. This leads to the submission of innovative work of a high standard. A student is required to submit a statement on the theme that he/she would like to take up for research. The statement may cover the following points:

- Proposed title of the dissertation
- Problem identified for the research
- Rationale
- Objectives
- Research design
- Tentative chapterisation
- Bibliography

The dissertation may have around 100 pages, neatly typed and hardbound.

Sequence of items in the dissertation

The following sequence may be followed in the preparation of a dissertation:

1. Cover page (on the hardbound cover)
2. Title page
3. Table of contents (with page numbers)
4. List of cases
5. List of abbreviations
6. List of tables (if any with each table title and page number)
7. Chapters
8. Major findings, conclusions and suggestions
9. Bibliography
11. Appendices (if any)

Detail guidelines for the dissertation:

The aim of the dissertation is to provide you with an opportunity to further your intellectual and personal development in your chosen field by undertaking a significant theoretical / practical unit of activity, having an educational value at a level commensurate with the award of your degree.

The dissertation can be defined as a scholarly inquiry into a problem or an issue, involving a systematic approach to gathering and analysis of information / data, leading to the writing of a structured report.

Selecting the dissertation topic:

It is usual to give you some discretion in the choice of topic for the dissertation and the approach to be adopted. You will need to ensure that your dissertation is related to your field of specialization. Deciding this is often the most difficult part of the dissertation process and perhaps you have been thinking of a topic for some time.

Normally we would expect a student to keep the following in view while choosing a topic:

- Relevance to the relationship between contemporary international law and international community
- Relate to concerned one or more of the subjects or areas of study within the core program and specialization stream
- Clarity in focus so as to facilitate an in depth approach, subject to the availability of adequate sources of information and to your own knowledge
- Being of value and interest to your personal and professional as also social development

Dissertation plan or outline:

It is recommended that you should have a dissertation plan to guide you right from the outset. Essentially, the dissertation plan is an outline of what you intend to do chapter wise and it should, therefore, reflect the aims and objectives of your dissertation.

There are several reasons for having a dissertation plan:

- It provides a focus to your thoughts.
- It provides your faculty guide with an opportunity, at an early stage of your work, to make constructive comments and to help provide the direction of your research.
- The writing of a plan is the first formal stage of the writing process and therefore, helps build up your confidence.
- In many ways, the plan encourages you to come to terms with the reading, thinking and writing in a systematic and integrated way, with plenty of time left for changes.

Finally, the dissertation plan generally provides a revision point in the development of your dissertation report in order to allow appropriate changes in the scope and even direction of your work as it progresses

Dissertation format:

- All students, while writing their dissertation, must follow rules as under:
- Front page should contain title, author, name of the degree/diploma, the name of the guide and the date of submission.
- Preface
- Acknowledgment
- Table of contents, giving page references for each chapter and section.
- List of cases, list of international norms and national laws, list of abbreviations, appendices, graphs and tables giving titles and page references.
- An abstract of the dissertation (approximately 500 words) titled: Summary.

- Chapter I should be a general introduction, giving the background to the dissertation, the objectives of the dissertation, the rationale for the dissertation, the plan, hypothesis, methodological issues and problems. Limitations, if any, may also be pointed out.
- Other chapters will constitute the main body of the dissertation. The number of chapters and their sequence will usually vary depending on, among others, a critical review of the previous relevant works relating to your major findings, a discussion of their implications and conclusions, possibly with a suggestion of the direction of future research in the area.
- After this concluding chapter, you should give a list of all the references you have used. These should be cross - references with your text. For articles from journals, the following examples may be kept in view: Claude Bruderle in, “People’s Security as a New Measure of Global Stability,” 83 International Review of the Red Cross 353-367, pp. (2001) (International Committee for Red Cross, Geneva) For books, the following: Malcolm Shaw, International Law 367 (5th ed. 2003, reprint of low-priced ed. 2007) (Cambridge University Press, New Delhi) For edited books, the following: Richard Overy, “The Nuremberg Trials: International Law in the Making,” in Philippe Sands (ed), From Nuremberg to the Hague: The Future of International Criminal Justice 1 (2003) (Cambridge University Press, UK)
- Finally, you may give appendices which should only include relevant statistical data or material that cannot be fitted into the above categories.

The layout guidelines for dissertation:

- A4 size Paper
- Font: Arial (10 points) or Times New Roman (12 points)
- Line spacing: 1.5
- Top and bottom margins: 1 inch/ 2.5 cm; left and right margins: 1.25 inches/ 3 cm.

Assessment Scheme:

- Continuous evaluation (Marks 50): (Based on Abstract, Regularity, Adherence to initial plan, Records etc.)
- Final Evaluation (Marks 50)
 - Evaluation of dissertation -30
 - Presentation of research through a seminar -10
 - Viva voce based on dissertation -10

FAMILY LAW - I

Course Code: LLB 104

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

This Course aims at providing adequate Sociological perspective so that the basic concepts relating to family are expounded in their social setting. It strives to give an overview of some of the current problems arising out of the foundational inequalities in the various family concepts. Another objective of the course is to view family law not merely as a separate system of personal laws based upon religions but as the one cutting across the religious lines and eventually enabling us to fulfill the constitutional directive of uniform civil code at least jurisprudentially at the academic study by identifying the core concepts in marriage laws of all communities to evolve a uniform civil code devoid of political nest. Women and children have special family relations and, therefore, it is aspired to develop insights amongst the students to ensure protection of constitutional rights of women and children in family law administration. In view of the conflicts of the interpersonal laws, conversion is causing problems. How conversion affects the family and whether it is compatible with the concept of secularism and to what extent such problem would stand resolved with the enactment of a uniform civil code, are some of the basics that needs to be examined.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

Course Code: LLB 206

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

Administrative law is as old as the administration itself. However, the form in which we find it today, Administrative is described a most outstanding legal development of the twentieth century. The reason for this development can only be attributed to a change of philosophy as regards the role and function of the State. The change in the concept of State from 'laissez faire' to a 'welfare state' has led to emergence of state activities in almost all spheres of human life. With the phenomenal increase in the area of state operation, the State was bound to take over a number of functions which were earlier left to private enterprise. In order to ensure that such functions are performed effectively and further due to certain other factors namely contingency, expertise etc. administrative agencies are given extraordinary powers and functions such as to make rules and deciding disputes apart from its wide discretionary powers. Obviously, this necessitated a new set of laws to check the possible abuses of such extraordinary powers on the part of administration. The courts in India and abroad in the course of time have developed various doctrines and methods to deal with such p[roblems. However, there is no end to this journey. The field is still open for new changes.

The main thrust of administrative law has been to study the nature of functions and powers exercised by the authorities on whom they have been conferred on and the study of remedies available to common man in case the limits of exercising power are transferred by such an authority. The focus or the centre point of this study, as usual as in cases of the study of other branches of public law, is the rights of individual wis a wis the public interest.

Course Contents:

TAXATION LAW

Course Code: LLB 501

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

Power to tax has been described as the power to destroy. This idea is being floated often whenever the State introduces a new tax. Is this true? Is it not necessary that in order to raise revenue and place the economy on solid foundation, the taxing power should be conferred on the State? The power to tax shall not go unregulated. In this context of a federal structure the distribution of the taxing powers assumes added significance. Obviously, a study of the Constitutional framework on taxation becomes important. Along with this, an analysis of the different laws enacted in exercise of these powers with their safeguards and remedies sheds light on the mechanics of the taxation by the Union and the States.

Course Contents:

Module I: General Principles of Taxation Laws

History and Development of Tax Laws in India, Fundamental Principles relating to Tax Laws, Taxing power and constitutional limitations, Distinction between: Tax, Fee and Cess; Tax avoidance and Tax evasion .

Module II: Basic concepts of Income Tax

Income, Previous Year, assessment Year, Person, Assessee and Total Income, Income not included in the Total Income. DISSERTATION

Course Code: LLB 608

Credit Units: 05

Course Objective:

The objective of the dissertation is to enable students to undertake Doctrinal/Empirical Research to acquire an in depth understanding of the problem identified and to suggest legal solutions for the same

Guideline:

A project for dissertation culminates into a very important and final stage of a student's educational and learning processes at Amity Law School. This leads to the submission of innovative work of a high standard. A student is required to submit a statement on the theme that he/she would like to take up for research. The statement may cover the following points:

- Proposed title of the dissertation
- Problem identified for the research
- Rationale
- Objectives
- Research design
- Tentative chapterisation
- Bibliography

The dissertation may have around 100 pages, neatly typed and hardbound.

Sequence of items in the dissertation

The following sequence may be followed in the preparation of a dissertation:

1. Cover page (on the hardbound cover)
2. Title page
3. Table of contents (with page numbers)
4. List of cases
5. List of abbreviations
6. List of tables (if any with each table title and page number)
7. Chapters
8. Major findings, conclusions and suggestions
9. Bibliography
11. Appendices (if any)

Detail guidelines for the dissertation:

The aim of the dissertation is to provide you with an opportunity to further your intellectual and personal development in your chosen field by undertaking a significant theoretical / practical unit of activity, having an educational value at a level commensurate with the award of your degree.

The dissertation can be defined as a scholarly inquiry into a problem or an issue, involving a systematic approach to gathering and analysis of information / data, leading to the writing of a structured report.

Selecting the dissertation topic:

It is usual to give you some discretion in the choice of topic for the dissertation and the approach to be adopted. You will need to ensure that your dissertation is related to your field of specialization. Deciding this is often the most difficult part of the dissertation process and perhaps you have been thinking of a topic for some time.

Normally we would expect a student to keep the following in view while choosing a topic:

- Relevance to the relationship between contemporary international law and international community
- Relate to concerned one or more of the subjects or areas of study within the core program and specialization stream
- Clarity in focus so as to facilitate an in depth approach, subject to the availability of adequate sources of information and to your own knowledge
- Being of value and interest to your personal and professional as also social development

Dissertation plan or outline:

It is recommended that you should have a dissertation plan to guide you right from the outset. Essentially, the dissertation plan is an outline of what you intend to do chapter wise and it should, therefore, reflect the aims and objectives of your dissertation.

There are several reasons for having a dissertation plan:

- It provides a focus to your thoughts.
- It provides your faculty guide with an opportunity, at an early stage of your work, to make constructive comments and to help provide the direction of your research.
- The writing of a plan is the first formal stage of the writing process and therefore, helps build up your confidence.
- In many ways, the plan encourages you to come to terms with the reading, thinking and writing in a systematic and integrated way, with plenty of time left for changes.

Finally, the dissertation plan generally provides a revision point in the development of your dissertation report in order to allow appropriate changes in the scope and even direction of your work as it progresses

Dissertation format:

- All students, while writing their dissertation, must follow rules as under:
- Front page should contain title, author, name of the degree/diploma, the name of the guide and the date of submission.
- Preface
- Acknowledgment
- Table of contents, giving page references for each chapter and section.
- List of cases, list of international norms and national laws, list of abbreviations, appendices, graphs and tables giving titles and page references.
- An abstract of the dissertation (approximately 500 words) titled: Summary.
- Chapter I should be a general introduction, giving the background to the dissertation, the objectives of the dissertation, the rationale for the dissertation, the plan, hypothesis, methodological issues and problems. Limitations, if any, may also be pointed out.
- Other chapters will constitute the main body of the dissertation. The number of chapters and their sequence will usually vary depending on, among others, a critical review of the previous relevant works relating to your major findings, a discussion of their implications and conclusions, possibly with a suggestion of the direction of future research in the area.
- After this concluding chapter, you should give a list of all the references you have used. These should be cross - references with your text. For articles from journals, the following examples may be kept in view: Claude Bruderle in, "People's Security as a New Measure of Global Stability," 83 International Review of the Red Cross 353-367, pp. (2001) (International Committee for Red Cross, Geneva) For books, the following: Malcolm Shaw, International Law 367 (5th ed. 2003, reprint of low-priced ed. 2007) (Cambridge University Press, New Delhi) For edited books, the following: Richard Overy, "The Nuremberg Trials: International Law in the Making," in Philippe Sands (ed), From Nuremberg to the Hague: The Future of International Criminal Justice 1 (2003) (Cambridge University Press, UK)

- Finally, you may give appendices which should only include relevant statistical data or material that cannot be fitted into the above categories.

The layout guidelines for dissertation:

- A4 size Paper
- Font: Arial (10 points) or Times New Roman (12 points)
- Line spacing: 1.5
- Top and bottom margins: 1 inch/ 2.5 cm; left and right margins: 1.25 inches/ 3 cm.

Assessment Scheme:

- Continuous evaluation (Marks 50): (Based on Abstract, Regularity, Adherence to initial plan, Records etc.)
- Final Evaluation (Marks 50)
 - Evaluation of dissertation -30
 - Presentation of research through a seminar -10
 - Viva voce based on dissertation -10

FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS & DIRECTIVE PRINCIPLES

Course Code: LLM106

Credit Units: 04

Course Objectives:

This paper aims at making students understand that fine balance between Fundamental Rights and Directive Principles is so significant that it has been declared by the Apex Court as the Basic Structure of the Constitution. Both have common origin and are equally fundamental and supplementary to each other. Wrong perception had grown earlier that Directive Principles were surplus age. Things have gone far out since then. They now enjoy a high place in our constitutional scheme. No primacy or superiority can be attributed to the Fundamental Rights. Judicial activism has given new destination to the Fundamental Duties. Both are 'two wheels of the same Chariot' moving fast to make welfare state and democracy in our country real.

Course Contents / Syllabus:

Module I Concept of Fundamental Rights:

Historical perspective of Fundamental Rights jurisprudence. Concept of Fundamental Rights: Natural law philosopher such as Locke & Rousseau Fundamental Rights and UDHR 1948; Charter of Human Rights enacted by U.N.O. Fundamental Rights and other rights. Fundamental Rights and Preamble.

Module II The Scope of Fundamental Rights:

Fundamental Rights: judicial activism, widening scope, enforcement, exceptions, suspension, amendment subject to the Doctrine of Basic Structure. Balance between Fundamental Rights and social control.

Module III The Scope of Directive Principles:

Directive Principles in retrospect. Philosophy underlying Directive Principles. Classification of Directive Principles Sanction behind Directive Principles Increasing status of Directive Principles Progress in carrying out the Directive Principles

Module IV Relationship between Fundamental Rights & Directive Principles:

How dynamic Directive Principles are fertilizing Fundamental Rights? Changing relationship between Directive Principles & Fundamental Rights.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INVESTMENT LAWS

Course Code: LLM 202

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

After Independence India has embarked upon all round efforts to modernize her economy through development ventures. Greater and greater emphasis is placed on increase of production in both industrial and agricultural sectors. Beside, there was the ever –pressing need for raising capital for investment in certain basic and key industries. All these required a considerably high rate of investment of capital. The process of modernization necessitated the adoption on newer technologies for Industry and agriculture. These technologies had to be borrowed from other developed countries. This, in turn needed foreign exchange which could be earned by the increased exports of goods and raw materials from India.

The need for accelerating the export trade of India's developing economy can hardly be over emphasized. Export earnings enable a developing country to finance its massive requirements of growth, to maintain its essential imports and thereby stimulate the process of its economic development.

Increasing exports have been necessitated to meet the growing needs of defence. India is a country rich in natural resources. One of the approaches to combat its economic backwardness could be in large –scale production and in maximization of its exports.

Import and export of goods and raw materials is a complex, complicated and intricate activity. It involves elaborate economics, fiscal, budgetary and monetary policy consideration.

The controls on export and imports are closely connected with the Foreign Trade Regulation Act 1992.

FEDERAL GOVERNANCE & LOCAL SELF GOVERNMENT

Course Code: LLM206

Credit Units: 04

Course Objectives:

The basic idea behind the rural and urban local bodies as units of self government is to strengthen democracy at the grass root level. The 73rd & 74th Constitutional amendments, 1992 are of great significance as they decentralize power and empower people by giving these bodies constitutional status. These amendments set out the guidelines to which state Legislations have to confirm with. The purpose this paper is to expose students about the functioning of these bodies which have come into limelight after getting the back-up of the Constitution.

Course Contents :

Module I Local Self Government

Local Bodies and the Constitutional 73rd and 74th amendment Acts, 1992, Rural local Bodies (Panchayat) and Directive Principle enshrined in Article 40, The Constitutional Amendments and empowerment of the people to play greater role in the development of urban and rural areas.

Module II FEDERAL GOVERNANCE

The local bodies are third level of government created by the Constitution, Novel federation of three tiers, Empowerment of women & local self- government.

Module III RURAL LOCAL BODIES (PANCHAYATS)

Core features of 73rd Constitutional Amendment Act, 1992 and guidelines laid down therein for rural local bodies (Panchayats), Role of State & Central Finance Commission, 11th Schedule.

Module IV URBAN LOCAL BODIES (MUNICIPALITIES)

Salient features of the 74th Constitutional Amendment, 1992 and guidelines laid down therein for urban local bodies (Municipalities), Role of State & Central Finance Commission, 12th Schedule.

MEDIA RIGHTS AND REGULATIONS IN THE CONSTITUTIONAL FRAMEWORK

Course Code: LLM 208

Credit Units: 04

Course Objectives:

In a welfare State the government under intoxication of power commits excesses on the people. Media is a powerful antidote to any abuse of power by the government. It is a means for communication between the people and their elected representatives whom they elect. It is also a means for making the government with all its three branches accountable to the people. Freedom of media though not expressly mentioned in our Constitution is taken as mentioned. It is settled once for all that the freedom of media flows from the 'freedom of expression' enshrined in our Constitution. For an orderly society responsible media is indispensable. This paper exposes the students to the media law which on the one hand protects its creative freedom & on the other curbs its possible abuse in public interest

Course Contents / Syllabus:

Module 1

Types of media: Press films, radio, television; private, public: visual & non visual, Freedom of the Press: Freedom of speech and expression under Article 19 (1) (a), Advertisement: Whether it is implicit in Article 19 (1) (a)? , Censorship: Cinematograph Act.

Module II

Freedom of press & challenges of new scientific developments, Freedom to broadcast & telecast: electronic media, government monopoly. Whether air waves are public property?, Trial by media (print and electronic); the right to reputation, privacy; the law of contempt of court.

Module III

Freedom of access to the source of information, Freedom in the volume of news or views, Freedom from excessive taxes, Freedom in employment of editorial force, Freedom from indirect attack

Module IV

Reasonable restrictions on the freedom of press under Article 19(2) only by duly enacted law not by executive action without back-up of law.

DISSERTATION

Course Code: LLM 250

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

The objective of the dissertation is to enable students to undertake Doctrinal/Empirical Research to acquire an in depth understanding of the problem identified and to suggest legal solutions for the same

Guideline:

A project for dissertation culminates into a very important and final stage of a student's educational and learning processes at Amity Law School. This leads to the submission of innovative work of a high standard. A student is required to submit a statement on the theme that he/she would like to take up for research. The statement may cover the following points:

- Proposed title of the dissertation
- Problem identified for the research
- Rationale
- Objectives
- Research design
- Tentative chapaterisation
- Bibliography

The dissertation may have around 100 pages, neatly typed and hardbound.

Sequence of items in the dissertation

The following sequence may be followed in the preparation of a dissertation:

1. Cover page (on the hardbound cover)
2. Title page
3. Table of contents (with page numbers)
4. List of cases
5. List of abbreviations
6. List of tables (if any with each table title and page number)
7. Chapters
8. Major findings, conclusions and suggestions
9. Bibliography
11. Appendices (if any)

Detail guidelines for the dissertation:

The aim of the dissertation is to provide you with an opportunity to further your intellectual and personal development in your chosen field by undertaking a significant theoretical / practical unit of activity, having an educational value at a level commensurate with the award of your degree.

The dissertation can be defined as a scholarly inquiry into a problem or an issue, involving a systematic approach to gathering and analysis of information / data, leading to the writing of a structured report.

Selecting the dissertation topic:

It is usual to give you some discretion in the choice of topic for the dissertation and the approach to be adopted. You will need to ensure that your dissertation is related to your field of specialization. Deciding this is often the most difficult part of the dissertation process and perhaps you have been thinking of a topic for some time.

Normally we would expect a student to keep the following in view while choosing a topic:

- Relevance to the relationship between contemporary international law and international community
- Relate to concerned one or more of the subjects or areas of study within the core program and specialization stream
- Clarity in focus so as to facilitate an in depth approach, subject to the availability of adequate sources of information and to your own knowledge
- Being of value and interest to your personal and professional as also social development

Planning the dissertation:

This will entail the following:

- Selecting a topic for dissertation and, if required, investigation.
- Establishing the precise focus of your study by deciding on the aims and objectives of research and/ or formulating questions to be investigated. Consider very carefully what is worth researching / investigating and its feasibility.
- Drawing up initial dissertation outlines considering the aims and objectives of the dissertation. Working out various stages of dissertation.

Devising a timetable to ensure that all stages of dissertation are completed in time. The timetable should include writing of the dissertation and regular meetings with your dissertation guide. Dissertation plan or outline:

It is recommended that you should have a dissertation plan to guide you right from the outset. Essentially, the dissertation plan is an outline of what you intend to do chapter wise and it should, therefore, reflect the aims and objectives of your dissertation.

There are several reasons for having a dissertation plan:

- It provides a focus to your thoughts.
- It provides your faculty guide with an opportunity, at an early stage of your work, to make constructive comments and to help provide the direction of your research.
- The writing of a plan is the first formal stage of the writing process and therefore, helps build up your confidence.
- In many ways, the plan encourages you to come to terms with the reading, thinking and writing in a systematic and integrated way, with plenty of time left for changes.

Finally, the dissertation plan generally provides a revision point in the development of your dissertation report in order to allow appropriate changes in the scope and even direction of your work as it progresses.

Keeping records:

This includes the following:

- Making a note of everything you read, including that discarded
- Ensuring that, when recording sources, the author's name, title of the work, date of publication, name of publisher and place of publication are included. You may consider the use of card index or database from the outset.
- Be clear what a direct quotation is and what is your paraphrase
- Make an accurate note of all quotations at the time you read and record them.

Dissertation format:

- All students, while writing their dissertation, must follow rules as under:
- Front page should contain title, author, name of the degree/diploma, the name of the guide and the date of submission.
- Preface
- Acknowledgment
- Table of contents, giving page references for each chapter and section.
- List of cases, list of international norms and national laws, list of abbreviations, appendices, graphs and tables giving titles and page references.
- An abstract of the dissertation (approximately 500 words) titled: Summary.
- Chapter I should be a general introduction, giving the background to the dissertation, the objectives of the dissertation, the rationale for the dissertation, the plan, hypothesis, methodological issues and problems. Limitations, if any, may also be pointed out.
- Other chapters will constitute the main body of the dissertation. The number of chapters and their sequence will usually vary depending on, among others, a critical review of the previous relevant works relating to your major findings, a discussion of their implications and conclusions, possibly with a suggestion of the direction of future research in the area.
- After this concluding chapter, you should give a list of all the references you have used. These should be cross - references with your text. For articles from journals, the following examples may be kept in view: Claude Bruderle in, "People's Security as a New Measure of Global Stability," 83 International Review of the Red Cross 353-367, pp. (2001) (International Committee for Red Cross, Geneva) For books, the following: Malcolm Shaw, International Law 367 (5th ed. 2003, reprint of low-priced ed. 2007) (Cambridge University Press, New Delhi) For edited books, the following: Richard Overy, "The Nuremberg Trials: International Law in the Making," in Philippe Sands (ed), From Nuremberg to the Hague: The Future of International Criminal Justice 1 (2003) (Cambridge University Press, UK)
- Finally, you may give appendices which should only include relevant statistical data or material that cannot be fitted into the above categories.

The layout guidelines for dissertation:

- A4 size Paper

- Font: Arial (10 points) or Times New Roman (12 points)
- Line spacing: 1.5
- Top and bottom margins: 1 inch/ 2.5 cm; left and right margins: 1.25 inches/ 3 cm

Guidelines for assessment of the dissertation:

While evaluating the dissertation the faculty guide will consider the following:

- 1. Has the student made a clear statement of the objective(s)?
- 2. If there is more than one objective, do these constitute parts of a whole?
- 3. Has the student developed an appropriate analytical framework for addressing the problem at hand?
- 4. Is this based on up-to-date developments in the topic area?
- 5. Has the student collected information / data suitable to the topic of the dissertation?
- 6. Are the techniques employed by the student to analyse the material data / information appropriate and relevant?
- 7. Has the student succeeded in drawing conclusions from the analysis?
- 8. Do the conclusions relate well to the objectives of the project?
- 9. Has the student been regular in his work?
- 10. Layout of the written report.

Assessment Scheme:

- Continuous evaluation (Marks 50): (Based on Abstract, Regularity, Adherence to initial plan, Records etc.)
- Final Evaluation (Marks 50)
 - Evaluation of dissertation -30
 - Presentation of research through a seminar -10
 - Viva voce based on dissertation -10

FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS & DIRECTIVE PRINCIPLES

Course Code: LLM106

Credit Units: 04

Course Objectives:

This paper aims at making students understand that fine balance between Fundamental Rights and Directive Principles is so significant that it has been declared by the Apex Court as the Basic Structure of the Constitution. Both have common origin and are equally fundamental and supplementary to each other. Wrong perception had grown earlier that Directive Principles were surplus age. Things have gone far out since then. They now enjoy a high place in our constitutional scheme. No primacy or superiority can be attributed to the Fundamental Rights. Judicial activism has given new destination to the Fundamental Duties. Both are 'two wheels of the same Chariot' moving fast to make welfare state and democracy in our country real.

Course Contents / Syllabus:

Module I Concept of Fundamental Rights:

Historical perspective of Fundamental Rights jurisprudence. Concept of Fundamental Rights: Natural law philosopher such as Locke & Rousseau Fundamental Rights and UDHR 1948; Charter of Human Rights enacted by U.N.O. Fundamental Rights and other rights. Fundamental Rights and Preamble.

Module II The Scope of Fundamental Rights:

Fundamental Rights: judicial activism, widening scope, enforcement, exceptions, suspension, amendment subject to the Doctrine of Basic Structure. Balance between Fundamental Rights and social control.

Module III The Scope of Directive Principles:

Directive Principles in retrospect. Philosophy underlying Directive Principles. Classification of Directive Principles Sanction behind Directive Principles Increasing status of Directive Principles
Progress in carrying out the Directive Principles

Module IV Relationship between Fundamental Rights & Directive Principles:

How dynamic Directive Principles are fertilizing Fundamental Rights? Changing relationship between Directive Principles & Fundamental Rights.

Course Code: LLM 202

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

After Independence India has embarked upon all round efforts to modernize her economy through development ventures. Greater and greater emphasis is placed on increase of production in both industrial and agricultural sectors. Beside, there was the ever –pressing need for raising capital for investment in certain basic and key industries. All these required a considerably high rate of investment of capital. The process of modernization necessitated the adoption on newer technologies for Industry and agriculture. These technologies had to be borrowed from other developed countries. This, in turn needed foreign exchange which could be earned by the increased exports of goods and raw materials from India.

The need for accelerating the export trade of India's developing economy can hardly be over emphasized. Export earnings enable a developing country to finance its massive requirements of growth, to maintain its essential imports and thereby stimulate the process of its economic development.

Increasing exports have been necessitated to meet the growing needs of defence. India is a country rich in natural resources. One of the approaches to combat its economic backwardness could be in large –scale production and in maximization of its exports.

Import and export of goods and raw materials is a complex, complicated and intricate activity. It involves elaborate economics, fiscal, budgetary and monetary policy consideration.

The controls on export and imports are closely connected with the Foreign Trade Regulation Act 1992.

Course Code: LLM206

Credit Units: 04

Course Objectives:

The basic idea behind the rural and urban local bodies as units of self government is to strengthen democracy at the grass root level. The 73rd & 74th Constitutional amendments, 1992 are of great significance as they decentralize power and empower people by giving these bodies constitutional status. These amendments set out the guidelines to which state Legislations have to confirm with. The purpose this paper is to expose students about the functioning of these bodies which have come into limelight after getting the back-up of the Constitution.

Course Contents :

Module I Local Self Government

Local Bodies and the Constitutional 73rd and 74th amendment Acts, 1992, Rural local Bodies (Panchayat) and Directive Principle enshrined in Article 40, The Constitutional Amendments and empowerment of the people to play greater role in the development of urban and rural areas.

Module II FEDERAL GOVERNANCE

The local bodies are third level of government created by the Constitution, Novel federation of three tiers, Empowerment of women & local self- government.

Module III RURAL LOCAL BODIES (PANCHAYATS)

Core features of 73rd Constitutional Amendment Act, 1992 and guidelines laid down therein for rural local bodies (Panchayats), Role of State & Central Finance Commission, 11th Schedule.

Module IV URBAN LOCAL BODIES (MUNICIPALITIES)

Salient features of the 74th Constitutional Amendment, 1992 and guidelines laid down therein for urban local bodies (Municipalities), Role of State & Central Finance Commission, 12th Schedule.

MEDIA RIGHTS AND REGULATIONS IN THE CONSTITUTIONAL FRAMEWORK

Course Code: LLM 208

Credit Units: 04

Course Objectives:

In a welfare State the government under intoxication of power commits excesses on the people. Media is a powerful antidote to any abuse of power by the government. It is a means for communication between the people and their elected representatives whom they elect. It is also a means for making the government with all its three branches accountable to the people. Freedom of media though not expressly mentioned in our Constitution is taken as mentioned. It is settled once for all that the freedom of media flows from the 'freedom of expression' enshrined in our Constitution. For an orderly society responsible media is indispensable. This paper exposes the students to the media law which on the one hand protects its creative freedom & on the other curbs its possible abuse in public interest

Course Contents / Syllabus:

Module 1

Types of media: Press films, radio, television; private, public: visual & non visual, Freedom of the Press: Freedom of speech and expression under Article 19 (1) (a), Advertisement: Whether it is implicit in Article 19 (1) (a)? , Censorship: Cinematograph Act.

Module II

Freedom of press & challenges of new scientific developments, Freedom to broadcast & telecast: electronic media, government monopoly. Whether air waves are public property?, Trial by media (print and electronic); the right to reputation, privacy; the law of contempt of court.

Module III

Freedom of access to the source of information, Freedom in the volume of news or views, Freedom from excessive taxes, Freedom in employment of editorial force, Freedom from indirect attack

Module IV

Reasonable restrictions on the freedom of press under Article 19(2) only by duly enacted law not by executive action without back-up of law.

DISSERTATION

Course Code: LLM 250

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

The objective of the dissertation is to enable students to undertake Doctrinal/Empirical Research to acquire an in depth understanding of the problem identified and to suggest legal solutions for the same

Guideline:

A project for dissertation culminates into a very important and final stage of a student's educational and learning processes at Amity Law School. This leads to the submission of innovative work of a high standard. A student is required to submit a statement on the theme that he/she would like to take up for research. The statement may cover the following points:

- Proposed title of the dissertation
- Problem identified for the research
- Rationale
- Objectives
- Research design
- Tentative chapaterisation
- Bibliography

The dissertation may have around 100 pages, neatly typed and hardbound.

Sequence of items in the dissertation

The following sequence may be followed in the preparation of a dissertation:

1. Cover page (on the hardbound cover)
2. Title page
3. Table of contents (with page numbers)
4. List of cases
5. List of abbreviations
6. List of tables (if any with each table title and page number)
7. Chapters
8. Major findings, conclusions and suggestions
9. Bibliography
11. Appendices (if any)

Detail guidelines for the dissertation:

The aim of the dissertation is to provide you with an opportunity to further your intellectual and personal development in your chosen field by undertaking a significant theoretical / practical unit of activity, having an educational value at a level commensurate with the award of your degree.

The dissertation can be defined as a scholarly inquiry into a problem or an issue, involving a systematic approach to gathering and analysis of information / data, leading to the writing of a structured report.

Selecting the dissertation topic:

It is usual to give you some discretion in the choice of topic for the dissertation and the approach to be adopted. You will need to ensure that your dissertation is related to your field of specialization. Deciding this is often the most difficult part of the dissertation process and perhaps you have been thinking of a topic for some time.

Normally we would expect a student to keep the following in view while choosing a topic:

- Relevance to the relationship between contemporary international law and international community
- Relate to concerned one or more of the subjects or areas of study within the core program and specialization stream
- Clarity in focus so as to facilitate an in depth approach, subject to the availability of adequate sources of information and to your own knowledge
- Being of value and interest to your personal and professional as also social development

Planning the dissertation:

This will entail the following:

- Selecting a topic for dissertation and, if required, investigation.
- Establishing the precise focus of your study by deciding on the aims and objectives of research and/ or formulating questions to be investigated. Consider very carefully what is worth researching / investigating and its feasibility.
- Drawing up initial dissertation outlines considering the aims and objectives of the dissertation. Working out various stages of dissertation.

Devising a timetable to ensure that all stages of dissertation are completed in time. The timetable should include writing of the dissertation and regular meetings with your dissertation guide. Dissertation plan or outline:

It is recommended that you should have a dissertation plan to guide you right from the outset. Essentially, the dissertation plan is an outline of what you intend to do chapter wise and it should, therefore, reflect the aims and objectives of your dissertation.

There are several reasons for having a dissertation plan:

- It provides a focus to your thoughts.
- It provides your faculty guide with an opportunity, at an early stage of your work, to make constructive comments and to help provide the direction of your research.
- The writing of a plan is the first formal stage of the writing process and therefore, helps build up your confidence.
- In many ways, the plan encourages you to come to terms with the reading, thinking and writing in a systematic and integrated way, with plenty of time left for changes.

Finally, the dissertation plan generally provides a revision point in the development of your dissertation report in order to allow appropriate changes in the scope and even direction of your work as it progresses.

Keeping records:

This includes the following:

- Making a note of everything you read, including that discarded
- Ensuring that, when recording sources, the author's name, title of the work, date of publication, name of publisher and place of publication are included. You may consider the use of card index or database from the outset.
- Be clear what a direct quotation is and what is your paraphrase
- Make an accurate note of all quotations at the time you read and record them.

Dissertation format:

- All students, while writing their dissertation, must follow rules as under:
- Front page should contain title, author, name of the degree/diploma, the name of the guide and the date of submission.
- Preface
- Acknowledgment
- Table of contents, giving page references for each chapter and section.
- List of cases, list of international norms and national laws, list of abbreviations, appendices, graphs and tables giving titles and page references.
- An abstract of the dissertation (approximately 500 words) titled: Summary.
- Chapter I should be a general introduction, giving the background to the dissertation, the objectives of the dissertation, the rationale for the dissertation, the plan, hypothesis, methodological issues and problems. Limitations, if any, may also be pointed out.
- Other chapters will constitute the main body of the dissertation. The number of chapters and their sequence will usually vary depending on, among others, a critical review of the previous relevant works relating to your major findings, a discussion of their implications and conclusions, possibly with a suggestion of the direction of future research in the area.
- After this concluding chapter, you should give a list of all the references you have used. These should be cross - references with your text. For articles from journals, the following examples may be kept in view: Claude Bruderle in, "People's Security as a New Measure of Global Stability," 83 International Review of the Red Cross 353-367, pp. (2001) (International Committee for Red Cross, Geneva) For books, the following: Malcolm Shaw, International Law 367 (5th ed. 2003, reprint of low-priced ed. 2007) (Cambridge University Press, New Delhi) For edited books, the following: Richard Overy, "The Nuremberg Trials: International Law in the Making," in Philippe Sands (ed), From Nuremberg to the Hague: The Future of International Criminal Justice 1 (2003) (Cambridge University Press, UK)
- Finally, you may give appendices which should only include relevant statistical data or material that cannot be fitted into the above categories.

The layout guidelines for dissertation:

- A4 size Paper

- Font: Arial (10 points) or Times New Roman (12 points)
- Line spacing: 1.5
- Top and bottom margins: 1 inch/ 2.5 cm; left and right margins: 1.25 inches/ 3 cm

Guidelines for assessment of the dissertation:

While evaluating the dissertation the faculty guide will consider the following:

- 1. Has the student made a clear statement of the objective(s)?
- 2. If there is more than one objective, do these constitute parts of a whole?
- 3. Has the student developed an appropriate analytical framework for addressing the problem at hand?
- 4. Is this based on up-to-date developments in the topic area?
- 5. Has the student collected information / data suitable to the topic of the dissertation?
- 6. Are the techniques employed by the student to analyse the material data / information appropriate and relevant?
- 7. Has the student succeeded in drawing conclusions from the analysis?
- 8. Do the conclusions relate well to the objectives of the project?
- 9. Has the student been regular in his work?
- 10. Layout of the written report.

Assessment Scheme:

- Continuous evaluation (Marks 50): (Based on Abstract, Regularity, Adherence to initial plan, Records etc.)
- Final Evaluation (Marks 50)
 - Evaluation of dissertation -30
 - Presentation of research through a seminar -10
 - Viva voce based on dissertation -10

FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS & DIRECTIVE PRINCIPLES

Course Code: LLM106

Credit Units: 04

Course Objectives:

This paper aims at making students understand that fine balance between Fundamental Rights and Directive Principles is so significant that it has been declared by the Apex Court as the Basic Structure of the Constitution. Both have common origin and are equally fundamental and supplementary to each other. Wrong perception had grown earlier that Directive Principles were surplus age. Things have gone far out since then. They now enjoy a high place in our constitutional scheme. No primacy or superiority can be attributed to the Fundamental Rights. Judicial activism has given new destination to the Fundamental Duties. Both are 'two wheels of the same Chariot' moving fast to make welfare state and democracy in our country real.

Pre-requisites:

Awareness of Constitutional Law

Student Learning Outcomes:

- The students will be able to critically evaluate constitutional process and mechanism through application and interpretation of Fundamental Rights and directive principles of state policy.
- Students will be in an enrobed analytical understanding of contemporary problems and uses in the discipline.

Module II The Scope of Fundamental Rights:

Fundamental Rights: judicial activism, widening scope, enforcement, exceptions, suspension, amendment subject to the Doctrine of Basic Structure. Balance between Fundamental Rights and social control.

Module III The Scope of Directive Principles:

Directive Principles in retrospect. Philosophy underlying Directive Principles. Classification of Directive Principles Sanction behind Directive Principles Increasing status of Directive Principles
Progress in carrying out the Directive Principles

Module IV Relationship between Fundamental Rights & Directive Principles:

How dynamic Directive Principles are fertilizing Fundamental Rights? Changing relationship between Directive Principles & Fundamental Rights.

Course Code: LLM 202

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

After Independence India has embarked upon all round efforts to modernize her economy through development ventures. Greater and greater emphasis is placed on increase of production in both industrial and agricultural sectors. Beside, there was the ever –pressing need for raising capital for investment in certain basic and key industries. All these required a considerably high rate of investment of capital. The process of modernization necessitated the adoption on newer technologies for Industry and agriculture. These technologies had to be borrowed from other developed countries. This, in turn needed foreign exchange which could be earned by the increased exports of goods and raw materials from India.

The need for accelerating the export trade of India's developing economy can hardly be over emphasized. Export earnings enable a developing country to finance its massive requirements of growth, to maintain its essential imports and thereby stimulate the process of its economic development.

Increasing exports have been necessitated to meet the growing needs of defence. India is a country rich in natural resources. One of the approaches to combat its economic backwardness could be in large –scale production and in maximization of its exports.

Import and export of goods and raw materials is a complex, complicated and intricate activity. It involves elaborate economics, fiscal, budgetary and monetary policy consideration.

The controls on export and imports are closely connected with the Foreign Trade Regulation Act 1992.

Pre-requisites:

The student ought to have the knowledge of contracts, company law and general understanding about commercial transactions including Consumer related issues and International law.

Student Learning Outcome:

- Understanding of the investigation and procedural intricacies of trade in international arena.

Course Code: LLM 208

Credit Units: 04

Course Objectives:

In a welfare State the government under intoxication of power commits excesses on the people. Media is a powerful antidote to any abuse of power by the government. It is a means for communication between the people and their elected representatives whom they elect. It is also a means for making the government with all its three branches accountable to the people. Freedom of media though not expressly mentioned in our Constitution is taken as mentioned. It is settled once for all that the freedom of media flows from the 'freedom of expression' enshrined in our Constitution. For an orderly society responsible media is indispensable. This paper exposes the students to the media law which on the one hand protects its creative freedom & on the other curbs its possible abuse in public interest

Pre-requisites:

DISSERTATION

Course Code: LLM 250

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

The objective of the dissertation is to enable students to undertake Doctrinal/Empirical Research to acquire an in depth understanding of the problem identified and to suggest legal solutions for the same

Guideline:

A project for dissertation culminates into a very important and final stage of a student's educational and learning processes at Amity Law School. This leads to the submission of innovative work of a high standard. A student is required to submit a statement on the theme that he/she would like to take up for research. The statement may cover the following points:

- Proposed title of the dissertation
- Problem identified for the research
- Rationale
- Objectives
- Research design
- Tentative chapaterisation
- Bibliography

The dissertation may have around 100 pages, neatly typed and hardbound.

Sequence of items in the dissertation

The following sequence may be followed in the preparation of a dissertation:

1. Cover page (on the hardbound cover)
2. Title page
3. Table of contents (with page numbers)
4. List of cases
5. List of abbreviations
6. List of tables (if any with each table title and page number)
7. Chapters
8. Major findings, conclusions and suggestions
9. Bibliography
11. Appendices (if any)

Detail guidelines for the dissertation:

The aim of the dissertation is to provide you with an opportunity to further your intellectual and personal development in your chosen field by undertaking a significant theoretical / practical unit of activity, having an educational value at a level commensurate with the award of your degree.

The dissertation can be defined as a scholarly inquiry into a problem or an issue, involving a systematic approach to gathering and analysis of information / data, leading to the writing of a structured report.

Selecting the dissertation topic:

It is usual to give you some discretion in the choice of topic for the dissertation and the approach to be adopted. You will need to ensure that your dissertation is related to your field of specialization. Deciding this is often the most difficult part of the dissertation process and perhaps you have been thinking of a topic for some time.

Normally we would expect a student to keep the following in view while choosing a topic:

- Relevance to the relationship between contemporary international law and international community
- Relate to concerned one or more of the subjects or areas of study within the core program and specialization stream
- Clarity in focus so as to facilitate an in depth approach, subject to the availability of adequate sources of information and to your own knowledge
- Being of value and interest to your personal and professional as also social development

Planning the dissertation:

This will entail the following:

- Selecting a topic for dissertation and, if required, investigation.
- Establishing the precise focus of your study by deciding on the aims and objectives of research and/ or formulating questions to be investigated. Consider very carefully what is worth researching / investigating and its feasibility.
- Drawing up initial dissertation outlines considering the aims and objectives of the dissertation. Working out various stages of dissertation.

Devising a timetable to ensure that all stages of dissertation are completed in time. The timetable should include writing of the dissertation and regular meetings with your dissertation guide. Dissertation plan or outline:

It is recommended that you should have a dissertation plan to guide you right from the outset. Essentially, the dissertation plan is an outline of what you intend to do chapter wise and it should, therefore, reflect the aims and objectives of your dissertation.

There are several reasons for having a dissertation plan:

- It provides a focus to your thoughts.
- It provides your faculty guide with an opportunity, at an early stage of your work, to make constructive comments and to help provide the direction of your research.
- The writing of a plan is the first formal stage of the writing process and therefore, helps build up your confidence.
- In many ways, the plan encourages you to come to terms with the reading, thinking and writing in a systematic and integrated way, with plenty of time left for changes.

Finally, the dissertation plan generally provides a revision point in the development of your dissertation report in order to allow appropriate changes in the scope and even direction of your work as it progresses.

Keeping records:

This includes the following:

- Making a note of everything you read, including that discarded
- Ensuring that, when recording sources, the author's name, title of the work, date of publication, name of publisher and place of publication are included. You may consider the use of card index or database from the outset.
- Be clear what a direct quotation is and what is your paraphrase
- Make an accurate note of all quotations at the time you read and record them.

Dissertation format:

- All students, while writing their dissertation, must follow rules as under:
- Front page should contain title, author, name of the degree/diploma, the name of the guide and the date of submission.
- Preface
- Acknowledgment
- Table of contents, giving page references for each chapter and section.
- List of cases, list of international norms and national laws, list of abbreviations, appendices, graphs and tables giving titles and page references.
- An abstract of the dissertation (approximately 500 words) titled: Summary.
- Chapter I should be a general introduction, giving the background to the dissertation, the objectives of the dissertation, the rationale for the dissertation, the plan, hypothesis, methodological issues and problems. Limitations, if any, may also be pointed out.
- Other chapters will constitute the main body of the dissertation. The number of chapters and their sequence will usually vary depending on, among others, a critical review of the previous relevant works relating to your major findings, a discussion of their implications and conclusions, possibly with a suggestion of the direction of future research in the area.
- After this concluding chapter, you should give a list of all the references you have used. These should be cross - references with your text. For articles from journals, the following examples may be kept in view: Claude Bruderle in, "People's Security as a New Measure of Global Stability," 83 International Review of the Red Cross 353-367, pp. (2001) (International Committee for Red Cross, Geneva) For books, the following: Malcolm Shaw, International Law 367 (5th ed. 2003, reprint of low-priced ed. 2007) (Cambridge University Press, New Delhi) For edited books, the following: Richard Overy, "The Nuremberg Trials: International Law in the Making," in Philippe Sands (ed), From Nuremberg to the Hague: The Future of International Criminal Justice 1 (2003) (Cambridge University Press, UK)
- Finally, you may give appendices which should only include relevant statistical data or material that cannot be fitted into the above categories.

The layout guidelines for dissertation:

Course Code: LLM106

Credit Units: 04

Course Objectives:

This paper aims at making students understand that fine balance between Fundamental Rights and Directive Principles is so significant that it has been declared by the Apex Court as the Basic Structure of the Constitution. Both have common origin and are equally fundamental and supplementary to each other. Wrong perception had grown earlier that Directive Principles were surplus age. Things have gone far out since then. They now enjoy a high place in our constitutional scheme. No primacy or superiority can be attributed to the Fundamental Rights. Judicial activism has given new destination to the Fundamental Duties. Both are 'two wheels of the same Chariot' moving fast to make welfare state and democracy in our country real.

Pre-requisites:

Awareness of Constitutional Law

Student Learning Outcomes:

Module II The Scope of Fundamental Rights:

Fundamental Rights: judicial activism, widening scope, enforcement, exceptions, suspension, amendment subject to the Doctrine of Basic Structure. Balance between Fundamental Rights and social control.

Module III The Scope of Directive Principles:

Directive Principles in retrospect. Philosophy underlying Directive Principles. Classification of Directive Principles Sanction behind Directive Principles Increasing status of Directive Principles
Progress in carrying out the Directive Principles

Module IV Relationship between Fundamental Rights & Directive Principles:

How dynamic Directive Principles are fertilizing Fundamental Rights? Changing relationship between Directive Principles & Fundamental Rights.

Course Code: LLM 202

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

After Independence India has embarked upon all round efforts to modernize her economy through development ventures. Greater and greater emphasis is placed on increase of production in both industrial and agricultural sectors. Beside, there was the ever –pressing need for raising capital for investment in certain basic and key industries. All these required a considerably high rate of investment of capital. The process of modernization necessitated the adoption on newer technologies for Industry and agriculture. These technologies had to be borrowed from other developed countries. This, in turn needed foreign exchange which could be earned by the increased exports of goods and raw materials from India.

The need for accelerating the export trade of India's developing economy can hardly be over emphasized. Export earnings enable a developing country to finance its massive requirements of growth, to maintain its essential imports and thereby stimulate the process of its economic development.

Increasing exports have been necessitated to meet the growing needs of defence. India is a country rich in natural resources. One of the approaches to combat its economic backwardness could be in large –scale production and in maximization of its exports.

Import and export of goods and raw materials is a complex, complicated and intricate activity. It involves elaborate economics, fiscal, budgetary and monetary policy consideration.

The controls on export and imports are closely connected with the Foreign Trade Regulation Act 1992.

Course Code: LLM 208

Credit Units: 04

Course Objectives:

In a welfare State the government under intoxication of power commits excesses on the people. Media is a powerful antidote to any abuse of power by the government. It is a means for communication between the people and their elected representatives whom they elect. It is also a means for making the government with all its three branches accountable to the people. Freedom of media though not expressly mentioned in our Constitution is taken as mentioned. It is settled once for all that the freedom of media flows from the 'freedom of expression' enshrined in our Constitution. For an orderly society responsible media is indispensable. This paper exposes the students to the media law which on the one hand protects its creative freedom & on the other curbs its possible abuse in public interest

Pre-requisites:

Knowledge of constitutional rights, and status of media in India is required before starting this course.

Student Learning Outcome:

The student shall be able to show with regard to:

Knowledge and Understanding

- Knowledge and in-depth understanding of laws relating with the media in India.
- An understanding of the emerging issues relating to the media and the challenges.
- Knowledge of the problems faced by media and the protections available to them, specifically in the context of India.

These learning outcomes will be achieved through a pedagogy which includes lectures, presentations, class discussion and project assignments.

Skills and Abilities

- An ability to critically and systematically integrate knowledge and to analyze, judge and manage complex issues.
- An ability to critically, independently and creatively identify and formulate legal issues in media related issues.

Furthermore the student will

- be able to show the ability to plan and carry out qualified tasks through adequate methods in set timeframes and by doing so contribute to the development of knowledge
- be able to show the ability to evaluate the outcomes of his or her work
- be able to show in oral as well as in written form, the ability to describe and discuss the findings and conclusions in their work and the knowledge and the arguments upon which the conclusions are founded
- be able to show this ability both in a national and in an international context.

Values and Attitudes

- An ability to show an attitude objectively, critically and ethically in judging the legal developments related to minorities and evaluate the impact it has on a national level as well as on the global arena.
- An ability show a consciousness of ethical application of media laws in conduct of hostilities and appreciate the challenges posed by asymmetrical warfare to the protections envisaged in Law.

DISSERTATION

Course Code: LLM 250

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

The objective of the dissertation is to enable students to undertake Doctrinal/Empirical Research to acquire an in depth understanding of the problem identified and to suggest legal solutions for the same

Guideline:

A project for dissertation culminates into a very important and final stage of a student's educational and learning processes at Amity Law School. This leads to the submission of innovative work of a high standard. A student is required to submit a statement on the theme that he/she would like to take up for research. The statement may cover the following points:

- Proposed title of the dissertation
- Problem identified for the research
- Rationale
- Objectives
- Research design
- Tentative chapaterisation
- Bibliography

The dissertation may have around 100 pages, neatly typed and hardbound.

Sequence of items in the dissertation

The following sequence may be followed in the preparation of a dissertation:

1. Cover page (on the hardbound cover)
2. Title page
3. Table of contents (with page numbers)
4. List of cases
5. List of abbreviations
6. List of tables (if any with each table title and page number)
7. Chapters
8. Major findings, conclusions and suggestions
9. Bibliography
11. Appendices (if any)

Detail guidelines for the dissertation:

The aim of the dissertation is to provide you with an opportunity to further your intellectual and personal development in your chosen field by undertaking a significant theoretical / practical unit of activity, having an educational value at a level commensurate with the award of your degree.

The dissertation can be defined as a scholarly inquiry into a problem or an issue, involving a systematic approach to gathering and analysis of information / data, leading to the writing of a structured report.

Selecting the dissertation topic:

It is usual to give you some discretion in the choice of topic for the dissertation and the approach to be adopted. You will need to ensure that your dissertation is related to your field of specialization. Deciding this is often the most difficult part of the dissertation process and perhaps you have been thinking of a topic for some time.

Normally we would expect a student to keep the following in view while choosing a topic:

- Relevance to the relationship between contemporary international law and international community
- Relate to concerned one or more of the subjects or areas of study within the core program and specialization stream
- Clarity in focus so as to facilitate an in depth approach, subject to the availability of adequate sources of information and to your own knowledge
- Being of value and interest to your personal and professional as also social development

Planning the dissertation:

This will entail the following:

- Selecting a topic for dissertation and, if required, investigation.
- Establishing the precise focus of your study by deciding on the aims and objectives of research and/ or formulating questions to be investigated. Consider very carefully what is worth researching / investigating and its feasibility.
- Drawing up initial dissertation outlines considering the aims and objectives of the dissertation. Working out various stages of dissertation.

Devising a timetable to ensure that all stages of dissertation are completed in time. The timetable should include writing of the dissertation and regular meetings with your dissertation guide. Dissertation plan or outline:

It is recommended that you should have a dissertation plan to guide you right from the outset. Essentially, the dissertation plan is an outline of what you intend to do chapter wise and it should, therefore, reflect the aims and objectives of your dissertation.

There are several reasons for having a dissertation plan:

- It provides a focus to your thoughts.
- It provides your faculty guide with an opportunity, at an early stage of your work, to make constructive comments and to help provide the direction of your research.
- The writing of a plan is the first formal stage of the writing process and therefore, helps build up your confidence.
- In many ways, the plan encourages you to come to terms with the reading, thinking and writing in a systematic and integrated way, with plenty of time left for changes.

Finally, the dissertation plan generally provides a revision point in the development of your dissertation report in order to allow appropriate changes in the scope and even direction of your work as it progresses.

Keeping records:

This includes the following:

- Making a note of everything you read, including that discarded
- Ensuring that, when recording sources, the author's name, title of the work, date of publication, name of publisher and place of publication are included. You may consider the use of card index or database from the outset.
- Be clear what a direct quotation is and what is your paraphrase
- Make an accurate note of all quotations at the time you read and record them.

Dissertation format:

- All students, while writing their dissertation, must follow rules as under:
- Front page should contain title, author, name of the degree/diploma, the name of the guide and the date of submission.
- Preface
- Acknowledgment
- Table of contents, giving page references for each chapter and section.
- List of cases, list of international norms and national laws, list of abbreviations, appendices, graphs and tables giving titles and page references.
- An abstract of the dissertation (approximately 500 words) titled: Summary.
- Chapter I should be a general introduction, giving the background to the dissertation, the objectives of the dissertation, the rationale for the dissertation, the plan, hypothesis, methodological issues and problems. Limitations, if any, may also be pointed out.
- Other chapters will constitute the main body of the dissertation. The number of chapters and their sequence will usually vary depending on, among others, a critical review of the previous relevant works relating to your major findings, a discussion of their implications and conclusions, possibly with a suggestion of the direction of future research in the area.
- After this concluding chapter, you should give a list of all the references you have used. These should be cross - references with your text. For articles from journals, the following examples may be kept in view: Claude Bruderle in, "People's Security as a New Measure of Global Stability," 83 International Review of the Red Cross 353-367, pp. (2001) (International Committee for Red Cross, Geneva) For books, the following: Malcolm Shaw, International Law 367 (5th ed. 2003, reprint of low-priced ed. 2007) (Cambridge University Press, New Delhi) For edited books, the following: Richard Overy, "The Nuremberg Trials: International Law in the Making," in Philippe Sands (ed), From Nuremberg to the Hague: The Future of International Criminal Justice 1 (2003) (Cambridge University Press, UK)
- Finally, you may give appendices which should only include relevant statistical data or material that cannot be fitted into the above categories.

The layout guidelines for dissertation:

- A4 size Paper
- Font: Arial (10 points) or Times New Roman (12 points)

- Line spacing: 1.5
- Top and bottom margins: 1 inch/ 2.5 cm; left and right margins: 1.25 inches/ 3 cm

Guidelines for assessment of the dissertation:

While evaluating the dissertation the faculty guide will consider the following:

- 1. Has the student made a clear statement of the objective(s)?
- 2. If there is more than one objective, do these constitute parts of a whole?
- 3. Has the student developed an appropriate analytical framework for addressing the problem at hand?
- 4. Is this based on up-to-date developments in the topic area?
- 5. Has the student collected information / data suitable to the topic of the dissertation?
- 6. Are the techniques employed by the student to analyse the material data / information appropriate and relevant?
- 7. Has the student succeeded in drawing conclusions from the analysis?
- 8. Do the conclusions relate well to the objectives of the project?
- 9. Has the student been regular in his work?
- 10. Layout of the written report.

Assessment Scheme:

- Continuous evaluation (Marks 50): (Based on Abstract, Regularity, Adherence to initial plan, Records etc.)
- Final Evaluation (Marks 50)
 - Evaluation of dissertation -30
 - Presentation of research through a seminar -10
 - Viva voce based on dissertation -10

FAMILY LAW - I

Course Code: LLB 104

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

This Course aims at providing adequate Sociological perspective so that the basic concepts relating to family are expounded in their social setting. It strives to give an overview of some of the current problems arising out of the foundational inequalities in the various family concepts. Another objective of the course is to view family law not merely as a separate system of personal laws based upon religions but as the one cutting across the religious lines and eventually enabling us to fulfill the constitutional directive of uniform civil code at least jurisprudentially at the academic study by identifying the core concepts in marriage laws of all communities to evolve a uniform civil code devoid of political nest. Women and children have special family relations and, therefore, it is aspired to develop insights amongst the students to ensure protection of constitutional rights of women and children in family law administration. In view of the conflicts of the interpersonal laws, conversion is causing problems. How conversion affects the family and whether it is compatible with the concept of secularism and to what extent such problem would stand resolved with the enactment of a uniform civil code, are some of the basics that needs to be examined.

ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

Course Code: LLB 206

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

Administrative law is as old as the administration itself. However, the form in which we find it today, Administrative is described a most outstanding legal development of the twentieth century. The reason for this development can only be attributed to a change of philosophy as regards the role and function of the State. The change in the concept of State from 'laissez faire' to a 'welfare state' has led to emergence of state activities in almost all spheres of human life. With the phenomenal increase in the area of state operation, the State was bound to take over a number of functions which were earlier left to private enterprise. In order to ensure that such functions are performed effectively and further due to certain other factors namely contingency, expertise etc. administrative agencies are given extraordinary powers and functions such as to make rules and deciding disputes apart from its wide discretionary powers. Obviously, this necessitated a new set of laws to check the possible abuses of such extraordinary powers on the part of administration. The courts in India and abroad in the course of time have developed various doctrines and methods to deal with such p[roblems. However, there is no end to this journey. The field is still open for new changes.

The main thrust of administrative law has been to study the nature of functions and powers exercised by the authorities on whom they have been conferred on and the study of remedies available to common man in case the limits of exercising power are transferred by such an authority. The focus or the centre point of this study, as usual as in cases of the study of other branches of public law, is the rights of individual wis a wis the public interest.

TAXATION LAW

Course Code: LLB 501

Credit Units: 04

Course Objective:

Power to tax has been described as the power to destroy. This idea is being floated often whenever the State introduces a new tax. Is this true? Is it not necessary that in order to raise revenue and place the economy on solid foundation, the taxing power should be conferred on the State? The power to tax shall not go unregulated. In this context of a federal structure the distribution of the taxing powers assumes added significance. Obviously, a study of the Constitutional framework on taxation becomes important. Along with this, an analysis of the different laws enacted in exercise of these powers with their safeguards and remedies sheds light on the mechanics of the taxation by the Union and the States.

DISSERTATION

Course Code: LLB 608

Credit Units: 05

Course Objective:

The objective of the dissertation is to enable students to undertake Doctrinal/Empirical Research to acquire an in depth understanding of the problem identified and to suggest legal solutions for the same

Guideline:

A project for dissertation culminates into a very important and final stage of a student's educational and learning processes at Amity Law School. This leads to the submission of innovative work of a high standard. A student is required to submit a statement on the theme that he/she would like to take up for research. The statement may cover the following points:

- Proposed title of the dissertation
- Problem identified for the research
- Rationale
- Objectives
- Research design
- Tentative chapaterisation
- Bibliography

The dissertation may have around 100 pages, neatly typed and hardbound.

Sequence of items in the dissertation

The following sequence may be followed in the preparation of a dissertation:

1. Cover page (on the hardbound cover)
2. Title page
3. Table of contents (with page numbers)
4. List of cases
5. List of abbreviations
6. List of tables (if any with each table title and page number)
7. Chapters
8. Major findings, conclusions and suggestions
9. Bibliography
11. Appendices (if any)

Detail guidelines for the dissertation:

The aim of the dissertation is to provide you with an opportunity to further your intellectual and personal development in your chosen field by undertaking a significant theoretical / practical unit of activity, having an educational value at a level commensurate with the award of your degree.

The dissertation can be defined as a scholarly inquiry into a problem or an issue, involving a systematic approach to gathering and analysis of information / data, leading to the writing of a structured report.

Selecting the dissertation topic:

It is usual to give you some discretion in the choice of topic for the dissertation and the approach to be adopted. You will need to ensure that your dissertation is related to your field of specialization. Deciding this is often the most difficult part of the dissertation process and perhaps you have been thinking of a topic for some time.

Normally we would expect a student to keep the following in view while choosing a topic:

- Relevance to the relationship between contemporary international law and international community
- Relate to concerned one or more of the subjects or areas of study within the core program and specialization stream
- Clarity in focus so as to facilitate an in depth approach, subject to the availability of adequate sources of information and to your own knowledge
- Being of value and interest to your personal and professional as also social development

Dissertation plan or outline:

It is recommended that you should have a dissertation plan to guide you right from the outset. Essentially, the dissertation plan is an outline of what you intend to do chapter wise and it should, therefore, reflect the aims and objectives of your dissertation.

There are several reasons for having a dissertation plan:

- It provides a focus to your thoughts.
- It provides your faculty guide with an opportunity, at an early stage of your work, to make constructive comments and to help provide the direction of your research.
- The writing of a plan is the first formal stage of the writing process and therefore, helps build up your confidence.
- In many ways, the plan encourages you to come to terms with the reading, thinking and writing in a systematic and integrated way, with plenty of time left for changes.

Finally, the dissertation plan generally provides a revision point in the development of your dissertation report in order to allow appropriate changes in the scope and even direction of your work as it progresses

Dissertation format:

- All students, while writing their dissertation, must follow rules as under:
- Front page should contain title, author, name of the degree/diploma, the name of the guide and the date of submission.
- Preface
- Acknowledgment
- Table of contents, giving page references for each chapter and section.
- List of cases, list of international norms and national laws, list of abbreviations, appendices, graphs and tables giving titles and page references.
- An abstract of the dissertation (approximately 500 words) titled: Summary.
- Chapter I should be a general introduction, giving the background to the dissertation, the objectives of the dissertation, the rationale for the dissertation, the plan, hypothesis, methodological issues and problems. Limitations, if any, may also be pointed out.
- Other chapters will constitute the main body of the dissertation. The number of chapters and their sequence will usually vary depending on, among others, a critical review of the previous relevant works relating to your major findings, a discussion of their implications and conclusions, possibly with a suggestion of the direction of future research in the area.
- After this concluding chapter, you should give a list of all the references you have used. These should be cross - references with your text. For articles from journals, the following examples may be kept in view: Claude Bruderle in, "People's Security as a New Measure of Global Stability," 83 International Review of the Red Cross 353-367, pp. (2001) (International Committee for Red Cross, Geneva) For books, the following: Malcolm Shaw, International Law 367 (5th ed. 2003, reprint of low-priced ed. 2007) (Cambridge University Press, New Delhi) For edited books, the following: Richard Overy, "The Nuremberg Trials: International Law in the Making," in Philippe Sands (ed), From Nuremberg to the Hague: The Future of International Criminal Justice 1 (2003) (Cambridge University Press, UK)
- Finally, you may give appendices which should only include relevant statistical data or material that cannot be fitted into the above categories.

The layout guidelines for dissertation:

COMPARATIVE CONSTITUTIONAL LAW

Course Code: PhDLW 103

Credit Units: 03

Course Objectives

The purpose of the course is to provide students, a quick introduction to the subject. The course starts by addressing the notion of constitutionalism. Both the evolution of constitutionalism and how the principle of written constitution made its way into modern definitions of constitutionalism will be explored. The central tenet of constitutionalism is the belief that the constitution can (and should) limit government. The judiciary is assessed as both an interpreter and enforcer of the constitution. The concept of judicial review is an important development in constitutional jurisprudence. The Course outlines the ways of protecting constitutional rights by entrenchment, including issues of legitimacy relating to judicial interpretation and application of rights with reference to UK, and the USA. Further, it touches upon the evolution of Constitutions and the making of States : Colonialism and its aftermath. Exerting authority over a territory, and liberation from within. It also examines the unwritten Constitution of the British with a comparative study. Making of the US Constitution – The Federalist Papers – Study of the Constitutions of the Australia, India, Canada, France and China.

Module I: The Principles of the Constitution and Constitutionalism

Types of Constitutions – Codification, Nature of the Constitution, Form of Government, and Amending Process of the Constitution. Evolution of Constitutions and Constitutionalism – Principle of Written Constitution -Supremacy of the Constitution – Limited Government

Module II: Supremacy of the Constitution

Concept of Judicial Review – Origin of Judicial Review in USA and India. Precedent – Nature, Meaning and Development – Doctrine of Stare Decisis – Ratio and Obiter – Methods for Determining Ratio – Prospective Overruling. Declaratory Theory of Law and Judge as a Legislator – Judicial Discretion and Limits – Judicial Creativity and Judicial Restraint – Judicial Accountability

Module III: Forms of Governments and Governance

Presidential and Parliamentary forms of Government, Separation of Powers, Check & Balance and rule of Law in Governance. Corruption and Constitutional measures.

Module IV: Constitutional Development in India

Structure of the Indian Constitution: Doctrine of Constitutionally Controlled Governance [From Kesavananda Bharati to I. R. Coelho], Fundamental Right to Education, Free Press and Independent Judiciary: Their Juxtaposition in the Law of Contempt of Courts, Right to Information as a Fundamental Human Right - Legislative and Judicial Perspective
