Outcome Report-Three days Sculpture, Modeling and Clay Workshop - ASAP

On the auspicious occasion of C VI's Birthday, the Amity School of Architecture and Planning had conducted a 3day-"Sculpture Modelling, Clay & POP Workshop" in observance of Innovation Week) where the 2nd and the 3rd year batches of B. Architecture and B.I.D had actively contributed to this workshop to bring out the best potentiality of the Department

It was held from 27th September, Wednesday to 29th September, Friday, 2017.

From Amity School of Architecture and Planning, 78 students participated all together and performed with flying colours.

The event was commenced under the guidance of Prof. Y. P. Singh by the organizing team headed by the guidance of Ar. Ashish Sharma, Ar. Monika Shekhar Gupta, Ar. Sudheer Singh Sikarwar, Ar. Rajeev Parashar and Ar. Vineet Sharma.

AIM:

This workshop was intended to appreciate clay and all its beauty, bounty and abundance; its strength and structural ability; its flexibility to bend and not break; its multi-functionality and usefulness; and its sustainability. It was to bring out the best of Clay structures which can be utilized for beautification of the campus and we as individuals create more self-reliant, energy efficient and sustainable environment. This event also aimed to create a "learning beyond the classroom" and gain practical knowledge about the essentialities of Clay and Plaster of Paris.

- Sculptures of clay
- Murals of P.O.P (Plaster of Paris)

- Landscape furniture by using cardboard and filling with mud followed by grass finish on top - Grass Chairs.

INTRODUCTION:

One of the main being the fact that Clay as a building material is ideal for tropical conditions in our subcontinent. Other than these natural clay – of which terracotta is made of, is the most flexible form of earth. It is essentially the least resisting material. Clay is the oldest known versatile building material which has lasted for centuries sustaining its value and utility, it is the most plastic and workable material as it takes shapes of a toy to a material used for making high rise buildings.

Clay is a healthy solution for modern day building construction. The structures made up of the clay have proven themselves for their versatility and endurance for ages. Clay was selected as the choice of material for various favorable reasons including the commercial considerations, natural availability and recyclable nature of clay. Looking into the current volatility of the manufacturing cost of cement, Clay proves to be the most cost efficient and sustainable.

Clay when fired leads to a porous structure which are filled with air when dry thus providing the best of the insulation properties largely useful to regulate the temperature (keeping cool in summers and warm in winters).

Meanwhile, Plaster of Paris is light in weight and more durable and has low thermal conductivity. It is very good fire resistant and hence a very good heat insulating material. It does not shrink while setting. Therefore, it does not develop cracks on heating or setting and forms a thick surface to resist normal knocks after drying. It mixes up easily with water and is easy to spread and level. It has good adhesion on fibrous materials. It gives a firm surface on which the colours can settle and has no appreciable chemical action on paint and does not cause alkali attack. Plaster of Paris gives a decorative interior finish. Its gypsum content provides it a lot of shine and smoothness. The best part is it can easily be molded into any shape.

OBJECTIVES:

- To offer hands-on experience building clay structure.
- To impart knowledge of traditional and modern earth techniques and provide exposure in different materials and mediums.
- To give students a “material imagination” and “3-d forms visualization” for design -Learning how to use clay and P.O.P as a building material
- Applying the proper construction methodologies for the task at hand
- Solving problems as they arise
- Setting priorities and keeping work on schedule

All these objectives were successfully completed with the guidance and aid of the organizing team.

METHODOLOGY:

Day 1: We started our day with development of design with imagination processing and processing of raw clay i.e. mixing of water into clay to create different sized lumps and keep it for drying.

Then the students were told to sketch and finalize their murals and sculptures.

We actually hands-on experience from the inception stage-final stage.

Day 2:As per design, sculptures were put to forms. During The process, sculptures were moulded into final forms and 2-d sketches were gradually converted to 3-d objects.

Day 3:The final day began with Final carvings and minute detail lings, coloring and carving on P.O.P tiles.

Finally, the objects were ready to be dried and displayed and the students along with the organizing team felt satisfied after 3-days of rigorous work which have payed them off well successfully and there was a bright smile on everyone's face.

CONCLUSION:

This practical hands-on workshop hascover the practical aspects of building with clay. It covers all the important basics we need need to know including moulding, preparation and detailing. The aim of the workshop has been fulfilled to its best by educating students about the potential of clay as an alternative material for various products, furniture and architecture.

IMPACT ON THE STUDENTS:

The department had a joint venture of collaboration of all the batches working together, acting as "helping hands" and "learning beyond the classrooms" which boosted confidence in the students to work into any environment and inculcating eye opening experience. The program has harvested a seed of hope to deal with ground realities in execution, management and spontaneous decision making for making the project successful.

The learning techniques have enhanced our knowledge and increased our passion towards buildings making sustainable environment for all of us to live in harmony.

NATIONAL SEMINAR

Concept of Check & Balance in Indian constitution does it require Reconsideration

February 03th, 2017

Organised By:
Amity Law School

Separation of Power is the inherent Characteristic of the Indian Constitution, but the mere separation is not sufficient without the 'Check & balance' among the three organs of the State. Though, broadly the demarcation of powers is clear, but unfortunately, by a thin line. An experience of 66 years of Constitution shows that every organ tried to increase its powers and to limit the powers of other organ.

Though Court accepted the parliament's absolute power to amend the Constitution but subject to Basic Structure of the Constitution. It has been observed that Parliament has been tried to limit the power of the Court by various Amendments. Court always remained vigilant and struck down the provisions of various amendment acts. Recently, in the matter of 9th Schedule Case (I.R. Coelho) and more recently NJAC Case reiterated the necessity of reconsideration of the concept of 'Check & Balance' as enshrined in the Indian Constitution.

The proposed Seminar is an effort to analyse that whether these conflicts show the strength of the Indian Constitution or Weaknesses? Is it the Power clash or true Interpretation of the Constitution? Is the 'Check & Balance' system is turning the balance towards any of the organ? Can we presume that the Court has become most powerful organ in Indian Constitution?

The proposed Sub-topics of the Seminar are as under:-

1. Parliamentary Privileges and Judicial Activism
2. Parliamentary Privileges and Judicial Immunity
3. Executive's interference in Legislature's functions
4. Judicial Activism: Recent trends.
5. Need of Judicial intervention in Executive's domain
6. Separation of Powers and Global Trends
7. Expanding role of judiciary through PIL.
8. Misuse of PIL.
